Minneapolis Crowd Wild As Dewey Opens Drive

Auditorium Packed, Thousands Turned Away; New Deal 'Defeatism' Scored

By International News Service

Minneapolis, Dec. 6.—A wildly cheering crowd of 10,500 Republican men and women that packed the Minneapolis Auditorium to its doors gave the Presidential nomination campaign of Thomas E. Dewey, New York's racket-busting prosecutor, a roaring send-off tonight.

So large was the crowd that moved on the auditorium to size up the young anti-crime crusader from the East that it was necessary to slam the doors nearly an hour before Dewey began his speech. Thousands, disappointed, were turned back.

Dewey opened his campaign with an attack on the New Deal which, he asserted, has adopted a policy of "defeatism" and a philosophy of "despair" after a seven-year attempt to solve the Nation's economic problems and restore prosperity.

"Let us turn away from a rendezvous with despair" into which he said the country has been led by the New Deal, "and start in the other direction now," Dewey pleaded.

Crowd Sets a Record

This country must first put its own house in order, he asserted, before any contribution can be made toward world peace.

And he warned that this cannot be accomplished by singing "Happy Days Are Here Again."

It was the largest political demonstration ever held in Minneapolis in the opinion of Mayor George E. Leach, who was one of the first to greet the candidate when he alighted from his train.

Fourth of July bombs, news reels, old-time songs and football pep songs kept the throng in enthusiastic mood through the hour it was forced to await arrival of the candidate.

When, finally, Gov. Harold E. Stassen, Mayor Leach and Dewey walked on the stage as the band played "Minnesota, Hats Off to Thee," the crowd went wild.

Sees Crisis in Faith

Dewey declared the country faces "a crisis of faith—faith in ourselves, in our system and in our own traditions."

He declared the "whole outlook" of the New Deal is that "the new plants, the new adventures, the new industries, are unnecessary and even possibly undesirable."

"There is nothing left to do," he added. "All that remains is to divide up what we got from the Indians. Such is the theory of the New Deal Administration. Such is its practice. With this philosophy, I totally and absolutely disagree."

While thus attacking the Roosevelt Administration generally, Dewey said at one point he believed it had "sincerely attempted" to fulfill its social obligations. He added, however, that this is "only half the job," saying:

"The other half is to maintain, to encourage the economic system which supports the Government and makes performance of social obligations possible."

Greatest Enemy "Defeatism"

At the outset, he said the country has "grave problems in agriculture, in labor, in business, in unemployment, in finance."

"Tonight," he went on, "I am not going to attempt to state solutions of those specific problems. Our difficulties must be dealt with as a whole. I wish to discuss the thing we must first get clear in our minds, if we are to be successful in dealing with any of those problems.

"First of all, we must make up our minds whether we believe in the continued growth of this country, or whether we believe we have reached our economic limit.

". . . Our greatest national enemy is defeatism. We have Republicans who do not think that our party can win through. We have Repub-

Kuhn Placed in Isolated Cell; Sing Sing Shows Denied Him

Fritz Kuhn turns for a parting glare as he enters Sing Sing to serve from two and one-half to five years for grand larceny. He was placed in protective custody

Puts on Gray Shoddy and Is Led to Segregated Block; Authorities Fear To Let Fellow Inmates Come Near Him

By the Associated Press

Ossining, N. Y., Dec. 6.—Fritz Kuhn entered a prison within a prison in Sing Sing today—a man set apart from his fellow convicts for fear of racial or political reprisals.

Barring any overturn by the higher courts of his conviction in New York of larceny and forgery for the theft of bund funds, he will serve 2½ to 5 years—actually some 20 months if his conduct is good.

Arriving here with eight other felons, four of them colored, he was put into the standard gray shoddy uniform and led away to the loneliest of Sing Sing's cell blocks, save only death row.

It is a building detached from the rest of the prison and its occupants are all in one of two gloomy classes—"disciplinary cases" and those who must be kept in protective as well as punitive custody.

Kuhn learned the rules on his first day: No attendance at prison movies, ball games and the like; no contact of any sort with ordinary prisoners; no assignment to work of any sort

GOP Weighs Late July Convention

Vanguard Here for Executive Committee Meeting Today

By Robert C. Albright

A one-month delay beyond the usual date of the Republican National convention, regardless of when Democrats meet, last night was being urged privately by influential members of the Republican National Executive Committee.

Put forward in informal talks as the vanguard of Republican executive committeemen arrived for today's meeting, the proposal would postpone the G. O. P. convention from June until late July and shorten accordingly the Republican Presidential campaign. Under this plan, the Republican National Committee would not meet until February.

The suggestion, aired in discussions at the Capitol and at Republican headquarters, was designed to meet the President's challenge for a shorter campaign, and to put an end to any "waiting" contest between Republicans and Democrats for convention position.

One exponent of a late July convention, date to be fixed without regard to Democratic decisions, argued privately that it would reverse the present Republican position of convention uncertainty and leave Democrats on the anxious seat "jockeying" to meet late but not too late.

The last week in July or the first week in August was suggested as

Mystery Man Sought; Embassy Waits Report Before Deciding Action

By the Associated Press

New York, Dec. 6.—An attache of the German consulate here was found bludgeoned to death today in the plentifully stocked and elaborately furnished home in Brooklyn where he had lived as a man of mystery and an object of neighborhood hostility.

The victim was Walter Engelberg, 42, a consulate secretary.

Two hundred detectives were assigned to the case tonight and the district attorney of Kings County said the Federal Bureau of Investigation had been asked to cooperate.

(A spokesman for the German Embassy in Washington said that until an official report has been received the embassy will not decide whether to intervene.)

Neighbors, complaining of noisy parties and various suspicions of activities, once had the Federal Bureau of Investigation make inquiries, and the place—not far from a Jewish burial ground—had been watched recently by police.

The body was found clad only in night clothes and police speculated Engelberg had been killed in a terrific struggle, either with a hammer or an ax.

About the place they found enough food and wine to last one man a year.

Finn Line Broken, Russia Says; Soviets Demand Rumanian Pact

Moscow Reports Success in Drive On Defenses of Karelian Isthmus

By the Associated Press

Moscow, Dec. 7 (Thursday).—Russian military commanders announced tonight they had broken through the main Finnish defense line—"known among Finnish White Guards as the Maginot-Kirke Line"—on the Karelian Isthmus.

The break-through was on the eastern section of the isthmus after artillery preparation.

The Soviet troops "forced the River Taipaleenicki and are advancing northwards," the communique said.

Defense Is Chain of Lakes

"On the eastern section of the Karelian Isthmus Soviet troops, after artillery preparation, broke through the main defense line of the Finns along the Vuoski water system, the announcement declared.

The Vuoski water defense system is a chain of lakes which reaches almost two-thirds of the way across the 65-mile-wide isthmus. On the eastern side the chain of lakes is about 25 miles from the frontier.

In this section, the communique said, Russians occupied the station of Kiyiniemi (Kiviniemi) on the Kexholm railway 25 miles from the border.

In the center of the isthmus, the Russians said, their forces occupied Korpioja on the branchline which runs from Viipuri to Valkjarvi. The Russians reported occupation of Valkjarvi yesterday.

Captures in Gulf

On the western side of the isthmus, the Russians reported capture of Perkjarvi, 22 miles from the border on the main Leningrad-Viipuri railway.

On the gulf of Finland coast they said they had captured Ino and Mesterjarvi in the Fort Ino area, 12 and 18 miles respectively, from the Russian border.

In the far north, the communique declared, the advance reached 22 miles south of Petsamo despite the "resistance of Finnish White Guards."

Railroad Reported Cut

In central Finland, they declared, they had cut the main railway line which reaches from Lake Ladoga to Sweden. The Russians said their forces had crossed the railway between Nurmes, 140 miles north of Lake Ladoga, and Joensuu, 80 miles north of the lake. Nurmes is about 30 miles from the frontier, and Joensuu about 60 miles.

Servant Girl Contributes Life's Savings—$400—to Help Homeland; Envoy Procope Announces Russian Setback on Isthmus

By Hedley Donovan

Washington's Finnish-Americans met last night in solemn commemoration of their homeland's twenty-second independence day.

In the drawing room of the Finnish Legation, bordered by oil paintings of the lakes, forests and snowy fields of the Baltic republic, they sang the ancient Lutheran hymn, "A Mighty Fortress Is Our God."

They heard Minister Hjalmar Procope, fresh from a 50-minute phone call to Helsinki, announce that Finnish troops had thrown back Soviet forces at every point along a wide front on the Karelian Isthmus.

They answered with a thundering cheer when the diplomat mounted a chair to cry, "There is no power great enough to kill the Finnish spirit."

They set up new volleys of applause when the minister called forward a shy woman who gave her life savings yesterday for the relief of refugees from the Russian invasion.

She was Miss Elsa Turunen, who works here as a domestic, and her savings came to $400. She had nothing to say about her gift or herself, beyond the quiet remark, "I wanted to help."

Word of the minister's transatlantic consultation spread through

Goering Paper Says Blockade Chokes Trade

Admits Britain Is Forcing Serious Problems on Reich

Berlin, Dec. 6.—An economics expert writing in Marshal Goering's periodical, "The Four-Year Plan," admits the British blockade has strangled German overseas trade and brought serious problems to the Reich.

Germany is attempting to solve these problems, officials explained, by developing southeastern Europe and the Scandinavian countries into supply houses for German needs and markets for the Reich goods.

Emil Helferrich, one of Germany's foremost economists, writes:

"We must face the facts. They are the same as in 1914-1918. England's power has brought German overseas trade to a complete standstill.

"German ships are lying in more than 100 harbors all over the globe. Those goods and ships are blockaded by the British navy and part of them already have been confiscated."

"The Fuehrer himself said, 'Germany must export or die.' The whole import and export trade, particularly the exporters, made the greatest efforts to carry out the Fuehrer's wishes and the result is that Kiel, Luebeck, Bremen and Hamburg (seaports) are all gradually heading toward ruin."

To combat the loss of oversea trade, Germany plans to grow in the Balkans what she needs.

Events Outline Communist Pattern

By Ben A. Thirkield,
Post Cable Editor.

A number of significant events yesterday helped a puzzled world to see something of the pattern of the gigantic world program of Russia—a pattern, these events indicated, which is beginning to embarrass Germany.

In Helsinki, where snow again prevented expected Russian air raids on the sixth day of the world's newest war, the German Ambassador turned up at a diplomatic reception celebrating 22 years of the independence for which Finland again is fighting.

In London, it was reported Germany had offered to Finland Czecho-Slovakian rifles at bargain prices.

British to Send 30 Warplanes

In London, it was announced Britain was sending 30 warplanes and other war material. Though a commercial transaction, it was said to bear "wholehearted approval of the British people."

In Helsinki there were 50 or 60 Italian bombing planes—presumably flown to Finland by Italian pilots, possibly refueling in Rumania, and then passing high over Russian-occupied Poland.

In Berlin, Marshal Goering, chief of Germany's economic machine, allowed to be printed an article reflecting the success of the British blockade—virtually admitting that Germany is being forced to her knees for lack of foreign trade.

In Moscow, the "Communist International," organ of the Comintern, warned Rumania of the advisability of concluding a mutual assistance pact with the Soviet Union.

In Istanbul, the German minister, Franz von Papen, made a hurried call on Turkish Foreign Minister Saracoglu.

At home of German Field Marshal von Mackensen, Fuehrer Hitler had an opportunity to talk with his ambassador to Rome, Hans George von Mackensen, in Germany ostensibly for his father's ninetieth birthday.

Yesterday's events were given added significance by events which have preceded them.

While Russia was obtaining mutual assistance pacts and military bases from Latvia, Estonia and Lithuania, thousands of Germans were suddenly ordered to "return to the Reich" and were settled in German-occupied Poland.

Russia Not Perfect Teammate for Reich

After Germany's army had virtually destroyed Polish resistance, Russian troops marched into east Poland, achieved a joint frontier with Hungary, and kept Germany separated from Rumania.

In all these events, the world found indications that Communism, once the bitter enemy of Nazism and now ostensibly its friend, is not yet a perfect teammate for the Third Reich.

In them, too, there was the obvious fact that Fascist Italy, once the active partner of Nazi Germany, is at least a less than passive enemy of Germany's new partner.

Still pending are these questions: "What is happening to the Rome-Berlin Axis?"; "Is something happening to the new Soviet-German partnership?"; and "What effect will Russia's actions have on Germany's war against France and Great Britain?"

The appearance of the German Ambassador at the Finnish independence celebration at least means that Germany does not regard Finland as an enemy merely because Russia, Germany's "friend," is at war with Finland. Russia no longer recognizes the Helsinki government. Germany, through her envoy's appearance at the Finnish reception, makes her recognition of the Helsinki government evident.

From the other end of the Rome-Berlin axis came actual support for Finland. The planes delivered within the last few days—reports of their number vary, but there has been no denial Italian planes reached Helsinki—were ordered before the Russian invasion began. But the speed with which they were delivered, and the strong likelihood they were flown from Italy by Italian pilots and with Italian mechanics, adds to their importance as a sign of Italy's position.

Equally significant, if not as helpful to Finland, are the strong demonstrations of the Italian citizens' sympathy for the Finns. Many Italians volunteered to fight against the Russians, and the pilots in Helsinki are reported to have expressed

$60 Will Get Heater For 7 Cold Children

By Lucia Giddens

Case No. 12.

A mother and father and their seven small children were living in two small attic rooms and sleeping on mattresses on the floor, when their plight was discovered.

They were moved to a small clapboard house when someone told the agency about them. But the house has no heat except what little comes from a small cookstove. It is not enough to keep the children warm, and this winter the baby, three months old, and another child who is six, have had grippe.

The father, Mr. H, can barely pay the rent and buy food for his family on his earnings of $48 a month on WPA. With a family of seven children, all under 10 years of age, nourishing food is too big a problem for any money to be spared for a heater.

With $60, a heater and warm clothing for the children can be bought to give them the comfort they have been denied. Somehow they don't think it is too much to hope for—that they will be warm at Christmas.

U. S. Merchant Marine Officers To Be Trained for War Duty

By John G. Norris.
Post Staff Writer

Administration officials yesterday revealed adoption of a program to train American merchant marine officers to protect their ships from submarine and mine dangers in war-infested seas.

The program, sponsored by the Navy and Coast Guard, will not only offer additional safeguards for United States merchantmen, but will fit merchant officers for command in event the United States should become involved in a war.

Under the two-fold plan, the Navy has set up a training school aboard the old cruiser Seattle at New York, to which merchant marine officers, holding naval reserve commissions, will be ordered for special instruction.

The Coast Guard revealed plans for assigning officers of ships formerly on the North Atlantic run to berths on cutters operating with the Atlantic neutrality patrol.

The Coast Guard phase of the program is especially designed to aid ship officers thrown out of work by restrictions imposed in the neutrality act.

Naval officials said the curriculum at its new school has been devised to aid the merchant officers under present conditions as well as pre-

Navy experts tell me that floating mines like the ones the Nazis are strewing around in English waters cost $323.50 each. We planted $79,000,000 worth in the North Sea during the World War.

The explosive used in such mines, they reveal, costs about 16 cents a pound.

"But explosives are like perfumes," adds one naval commander, sentimentally; "some cost more, some less." All smell bad, though.

Like smarter men, I'm sometimes confused by Secretary Henry Morgenthau's fiscal years. The last one (1939) ended last June 30; it began July 1, 1938. Most statistics you see these days are for that year.

We are now in the 1939-40 fiscal year, loosely called 1940.

Officials are now scratching their heads about the budget for fiscal year 1941, which will begin next July 1.

* * * *

So there are always three fiscal years in the air, like a juggler's three balls; with alibis for the last one, guesses about the present one, and hopes for the next one. Each little fiscal year has a deficit all its own.

Observers here who are well acquainted with members of Congress suspect that the average Congressman does not read two books a year. Some read a book a week; many seldom read a book.

Maybe some impractical, idealistic Congressman should introduce a bill requiring each member to prove he has read a book each fortnight, before drawing his semimonthly pay check.

If young navy officers must read books, why not Congressmen?

With every American waiting for a sign from President Roosevelt about a third term, Coolidge's cryptic "I do not choose to run" assumes immense interest.

The most convincing interpretation of the Coolidge third term statement is William Allen White's, in his Coolidge biography, "A Puritan in Babylon."

Mr. White makes it plain that, after his statement, Coolidge hoped for and expected another nomination, was bitterly disappointed when it didn't come.

He cites Chief Justice Taft in support.

Incidentally, Mr. White's book belongs on every studious citizen's bookshelf.

There's a whisper in the Capital that Mexico, which so far has confiscated oil holdings of two big companies, is preparing to confiscate more oil—including the Mellon holdings, which have thus far escaped.

Justices of the Supreme Court have to do such a prodigious amount of reading that all of them try hard to speed up their reading when they can. Justice Frankfurter, for example, does a good bit of his reading standing up. He has a little reading stand in one corner of his office, like a little pulpit, which holds briefs or law books up chest high as he stands.

"—this was deemed unethical"

Honesty among politicians apparently has improved vastly in the last few decades.

It is a far cry, at least, from the day when old-time State legislators, as described in Mari Sandoz' novel, "Capital City," deemed it unethical to take bribes from both factions, and when a solon was deemed honest if he "stayed bought."

In recent years in Washington there has been only one overt act of corruption, when a Congressman was found guilty of selling an appointment to West Point.

In that case, it is now believed here, it was the member's son who was really at fault.

Lippmann Asks 'Death Fight' on Totalitarianism

Lives of the Free Peoples at Stake, Industrialists Told

Special Dispatch to The Post

New York, Dec. 6.—Walter Lippmann, columnist, told American industrial leaders tonight that the fight against totalitarianism is "a life and death struggle"—a battle to be fought in the knowledge "that this is no conflict between equally respectable and rational social philosophies."

"This is not a conflict in the drawing room, in university halls, in newspapers, magazines and books," he warned. "This is a conflict in which everything—the lives of the political, industrial and intellectual and religious leaders of free peoples and all the constitutions of the West, their law, their property and their scientific learning—are at stake."

Lippmann spoke here before the forty-fourth annual Congress of American Industry.

Discussion Futile, He Says

Discussion of communism or fascism as "philosophies" at varience with American democracy is futile, he asserted, since totalitarianism is "simply and solely a denial of all philosophy and a negation of all principle."

To enter solemn discussion of Communist and Nazi theory "is to let one's attention be diverted from the grim reality of the conflict," Lippmann said.

Totalitarian propagandists, he pointed out, "demand a free and open-minded discussion of their ideologies—up to the point when they are strong enough to seize power and end all further discussion."

"Ideological discussion with the totalitarians is a one-way affair," he said. "If Mr. Browder runs for President and is beaten, he can run again next time, and the time after . . . But if Mr. Browder won the election, or even got enough votes to be strong enough to seize power by force, then in his ideology there will be no more elections, and no more free speech, and no more civil liberties."

Fundamental Principles Described.

In a free country, he continued, "a Communist or a Nazi can lose many times but he is never finally beaten. But if he wins once, his opponents are put to death, imprisoned or exiled."

He described as fundamental principles of Western civilization the "reign of law" and recognition that the individual man "is not a thing," to be used by the state as an animal or machine, but a being "made in the image of God."

Totalitarianism, the contradition of these principles, can claim no principles of its own, he charged.

Hitler, after rising to power as Europe's anti-bolshevist champion, and apostle of the "Nordic race," has "opened the door of the whole of the Nordic world to bolshevik domination," he said.

"Bamboozle the Ignorant"

Stalin, condemned the pact of Munich as "a cowardly betrayal of the rights of small nations," Lippman observed, but less than a year later refused to help save Poland unless Great Britain "would give him half of Poland and three independent Baltic nations besides."

The masters of Moscow and Berlin use their "ideologies" only to "bamboozle the ignorant," he contended. "The rest of the world should stop wasting its energy and confusing its thinking by acting as if these ideologies were serious, sincere, respectable social philosophies that open-minded civilized men might debate and accept.

"What the idealists thought was the fanaticism of great revolutionaries has turned out to be nothing more than the cold, calculating cynicism of conspirators," he declared.

Guard Liberty, Bishop Freeman Asks

Special Dispatch to The Post

New York, Dec. 6.—America must protect religious liberty in order to maintain civil liberty, the Right Rev. James E. Freeman, Bishop of Washington, told the National Association of Manufacturers at a luncheon today at the Hotel Waldorf Astoria.

"Let us be sure of this: When religious liberty goes, civil liberty goes with it," Bishop Freeman said.

U. S. Planning Would Stifle New Industries, Parley Told

By the Associated Press

New York, Dec. 6.—J. Howard Pew, president of the Sun Oil Co., told the Congress of American Industry today business enterprise must preserve its freedom for endless opportunities ahead of it.

Ridiculing economic planning, the Philadelphia industrialist said Government paternalism would close the door to "unlimited and uncharted areas of new opportunity."

"No economic planning authority," he asserted, "could possibly have foreseen, planned, plotted and organized such an amazing spectacle of industrial progress as the world has witnessed here in America in the last century."

Leading industrial chiefs listened as Pew expanded the keynote of the convention's discussion—maintenance of the country's traditional liberties and system of free enterprise in face of the encroachments of Government control.

Howard Coonley, president of the National Association of Manufacturers sponsor of the congress, in launching the three-day program dedicated it to analysis of American principles and practices.

Until a "few generations ago," Pew said, Government-dictated economic programs were the rule and "nearly always ended in suffering and disasters."

"Yet today," he added, "we find that the economic planners are back with us, seeking once more to stifle our minds, to suppress invention, to prosecute originality and penalize progress."

Among industries with promise of further development, he cited electricity, chemistry, metal alloys, plastics, synthetic fabrics, television, modernization of housing. He continued:

"One may imagine Henry Ford, with his vision of the automobile's future, appearing before the planning board, to ask that in its program for the next two or three decades it consider providing a few billions of capital, along with the necessary materials and labor.

"The planning board would have recognized Mr. Ford as a mild lunatic. That would have ended the foolish talk about horseless carriages."

From history, he recited: George Washington thought the first demonstration of John Fitch's steamboat of too little significance to justify his presence; President Ulysses S. Grant thought the telephone was "very remarkable" but wondered "who in the world would ever want to use one of them."

W. T. Holliday, president of the Standard Oil Co. of Ohio, said the "more abundant life" is the objective of American manufacturers, but can be reached only if "human initiative" is allowed free play.

For 1,500 years ending in 1800, he recounted, the ability of the ordinary man to buy goods with his labor did not improve perceptibly, but in 122 years under the American system the purchasing power of wages climbed 1,221 per cent.

Buell Backs Hull Trade Pacts Before Monopoly Committee

By John B. Oakes
Post Staff Writer

To abandon Secretary Hull's trade agreement program would be "a catastrophic mistake" for this country, the Monopoly Committee was told yesterday by Raymond Leslie Buell, author, editor and former president of the Foreign Policy Association.

Warning the United States is in "grave danger" of moving toward state capitalism, Buell prophesied disastrous results for the Nation if the totalitarian powers are victorious in the present war.

As an essential bulwark for retention of "the American system," he urged continuance of the Administration's trade agreement policy. Renewal of the present trade agreements act next June has been opposed by numerous members of Congress.

Buell, whose testimony was presented at hearings on wartime price structure, advised the committee that high prices and dumping of imported raw materials could be prevented through Government negotiation with the supplying country or through the exercise of existing governmental powers.

The committee—which has shown deep concern over the possibility of skyrocketing prices of rubber and tin—was told by Buell the State Department is in "a strong position" to protect prices by negotiations with belligerents.

Buell followed Paul G. Hoffman, president of the Studebaker Corporation, who asked that this Government protest to Great Britain against the "war-time profiteering" of the "English-controlled rubber trust." H. S. Vance, chairman of the corporation, asserted "there is no justification for the increase in the price of rubber since the outbreak of war."

However, Buell said that "generally speaking, France and Britain wish to do nothing that might antagonize the United States." Agreements have already been made with Canada to prevent the dumping of furs, and with Great Britain to insure the purchase of American tobacco, Buell pointed out.

But if negotiations fail, he said that import-price problems arising out of war might be met through such "sanctions" as the escape clauses of the British-American trade agreement; the antidumping act; imposition of countervailing duties, exchange restrictions and agricultural import quotas.

Senator Borah (Republican), of Idaho, acting chairman of the committee, suggested that Buell's arguments did not apply to "things we need," such as rubber. In return for holding down the rubber price, the British might demand American credits, Borah said.

"We would give them credit," the Senator predicted, "and the cash requirement of the neutrality act would disappear like mist before the sun."

"The President could threaten to exclude British ships from our ports," Buell countered.

Plane Exports a Club

"The President wouldn't say that," responded Borah.

"I can't speak for the President," said the witness.

"I can't either," Borah retorted, "but I know he would exercise a vast amount of common sense in this matter."

Buell suggested Congress might threaten to cut off airplane exports if the British permitted rubber prices to shoot skyward.

In the event of a long war, Buell predicted, this country may ultimately be excluded from foreign markets "unless it goes out and vigorously fights for them"—particularly if the Germans or Japanese triumph.

If communism sweeps Europe and Asia, "the United States would either have to renounce foreign trade and go upon a basis of self-containment, which in itself is a form of state capitalism, or it would have to go into export and import controls and embark upon a diplomatic if not military struggle for markets," Buell warned.

Legal Fraternity Hears W. H. Leahy

Members of Washington and Choate alumni chapters, Sigma Nu Phi legal fraternity, were urged last night by William H. Leahy, attorney, to guard carefully the high ethics of their profession. They met in joint session at Burt's Tavern.

Frank L. Peckham, toastmaster, was introduced by Harry L. Clendenning, chancellor of Washington Chapter. William F. Cochrane, chancellor of Choate Chapter, also spoke.

Shots From Guard Balk Escape of Kansas Convicts

Lansing, Kans., Dec. 6 (AP).—Gunfire from a guard broke up an escape attempt of 12 State penitentiary convicts today.

The 12 convicts, with four guards and officers as hostages, were within 75 yards of the prison wall when Officer Ralph Sanders opened fire, forcing the prisoners to scatter. Other guards in the yard subdued the group.

Warden Amrine said no one was shot but that two prisoners were "roughed up a bit."

Conscience Gives $200 to District

The District's treasury was enriched yesterday by $200—and with no municipal service or tax the reason.

"It was somebody's conscience," said Col. John M. Oehmann, District building inspector, who received the money. Col. Oehmann said it was the first time in his 26 years with the local government that anyone has sent in money and labeled it for the "conscience fund." The only reason he could offer was that someone did some building without a permit.

The money, in two one-hundred bills, came to him in a brown envelope.

1,500 Children Cheer Concert In Elmira

National Symphony Is Given Ovation In Ithaca Program

By John Chabot Smith
A Staff Correspondent.

Elmira, N. Y., Dec. 6.—All the schools for miles around Elmira were emptied this afternoon when more than 1,500 children trooped into town to hear the National Symphony Orchestra concert.

Violinist Francis Garzia exchanged his bow for a baton while Dr. Hans Kindler rested for this evening's concert. Manager C. C. Cappel acted as master of ceremonies and music teacher. The orchestra presented the same program of children's favorites they played in Washington high schools last month, with the addition of Mendelssohn's "Fingal's Cave" overture.

Elmira's largest movie and vaudeville theater was taken for today's two concerts.

In explanation of the program's theme, "Music as a universal language," Cappel introduced various foreign-born members of the orchestra, who treated the children to a few words in his own language. French, Italian, Dutch and Russian were surprising tongues, and the children applauded with interest, but there was an "Oooh" of wonder at Polish and Czech.

Cappel said while the children couldn't understand the players when they spoke, they could understand the language of the music. And to make it clearer he introduced the different instruments one by one before the numbers that best illustrated them; strings before Berlioz's dance of the Sylphs, brasses and drums before Tchaikowsky's Marche Slave, wood-winds before Grieg's Hall of the Mountain King.

The cymbals and trombone were favorites among the young audience, who watched in fascination and promptly practiced on imaginary instruments. In the more exciting parts of the Marche Slave and Rossini's "William Tell" overture, little arms were flinging up and down, in and out, all over the auditorium.

William Tell held a surprise for the children. Though they had been told about the music in music appreciation classes and some had heard parts on records, they didn't expect to find it in Hi-Yo Silver's theme song. They spotted it at once this afternoon, and in a moment there were a thousand Lone Rangers bouncing up and down in their seats.

Today's concerts in Elmira, the children's concert this afternoon, and a formal program tonight, are the result of a community endeavor begun by the music club here, the Thursday morning musicals. The city has a population of 50,000 supported by a dozen small factories making such articles as nuts and bolts and salesmen's order books.

Until four years ago only a few hundred took any interest in music, according to Mrs. John A. Matthews, chairman of the Community Center committee. Then music lovers had to go to New York, Ithaca, or Rochester to hear first-rank artists. Today, with 2,300 members, community concerts have made Elmira a music center in its own right, and the first children's series was held last year.

At Ithaca last night, where Cornell University has long brought fine music to discriminating audiences, the National Symphony Orchestra was given a thunderous ovation. The Sibelius Symphony was again the major and final work on the program, and Dr. Kindler again refused to play an encore.

It was a particularly dramatic performance, more effective than Monday's in Syracuse. "Dr. Kindler was more in the mood tonight; he made us give everything we'd got," one of the bass players said afterward, as he limply took off his white waistcoat. "That Sibelius takes it all out of you."

Bailey Hall, where the concert was played, is one of the finest auditoriums in the country for acoustics. Some 25 years old, semi-circular and faced with special tiles, it had room for the tremendous crescendos of the symphony and yet the faintest pianissimo was not lost. Colors in harmony that fade in a high school or theater regained their depth in this concert hall

When Paul J Weaver, secretary of the Cornell music committee, met Dr. Kindler during the intermission, it was a case of mutual admiration. Dr. Kindler's excited enthusiasm for the hall was matched by Weaver's admiration for the orchestra.

"That Moussorgsky (excerpts from 'Boris Godounov') was glorious," he said. "I have never heard an orchestra with so much vitality. You must come again next year." And then they talked about the "lost" Haydn Symphony, No. 46, which Dr. Kindler brought back from England last summer, and Dr. Kindler told again the story of how he had found it. It was given last night.

As students, teachers, and residents of the town left the hall they crowded the stage door to find and praise the conductor, who vanished the moment he left the stage. Standing in the headlights of the waiting buses was a gray-haired woman in a shawl, shivering in the cold night.

When the conductor didn't come out, she seized one of the players. "I used to know Dr. Kindler" she said slowly. "Years ago when he played the cello. Tell him."—she took a breath, and then spoke quickly—"tell him Ethel Nichols sends her best regards and never enjoyed herself so much in her life."

The men piled into the bus, arms and backs aching, released from the tension of the concert. At midnight they struggled into the hotel here, clamored for mail, dropped their instruments and descended hungrily to the bar. It was a well-equipped bar, but the midnight arrival of 85 musicians with wolfish appetites was a little too much. Waiters flew about; sausages and sardines heaped the tables, and a violinist experimented with raw beef.

But at 2 a. m. a cellist finished his beer and remarked: "You save money here. I came in with a big appetite, but when you wait an hour for a sandwich, what's the use?"

Gifts to Chest Reach 94 % Of Goal

After Campaign Efforts to Raise $2,000,000 Continues

Post-campaign efforts to fill the Community Chest continued yesterday, swelling contributions to $1,888,498, more than 94 per cent of the total needed by District charities for the next year.

As officials pointed out that the momentum of the drive has slowed down, but not stopped, they announced that the Government unit, led by Frank T. Hines, has come closest to meeting its quota. Pledges for $758,299, or 99.1 per cent of the quota, have been obtained.

"There isn't a unit chairman that doesn't consider that his quota is reachable," Chauncey G. Parker, general chairman, said yesterday.

"With that kind of spirit surely we can reach and convince enough additional givers to enable us to chalk up a victory."

Although the number of pledges, 195,870, is 3,000 more than last year's, the amount of money received is less, because of a smaller average gift.

About 50 volunteers are expected to join forces with the Metropolitan unit beginning tomorrow with a check-up of prospective givers who have not been reached.

Herbert L. Willett, director of the Chest, emphasized that "every cent of our $2,000,000 goal is needed in order to continue human services through 67 agencies in Washington and suburbs on the same basis as last year."

"Every time we erase 1 per cent of the present 6 per cent shortage we are adding $20,000 to the money that will be available to meet human needs during the coming year."

The greatest success of each unit, as released by Chest officials, is as follows:

Group unit (business firms and their employes), 95.37 per cent of the quota of 453,000; metropolitan unit (residential), 96.57 per cent of the quota of $201,000; advance gifts unit, 87.38 per cent of 521,000; suburban unit, 81.4 per cent of $52,000, and the Capital unit, 84.34 per cent of $8,000.

A.F.L. to Honor Retiring Official

Besides Morrison the guests will be William Green, president of the A. F. of L., Morrison's daughter, Miss Esther Morrison, of New York, and his son, Nesbitt Morrison, of this city.

The entertainment committee is made up of Irving W. Bucklin, chairman; Edith K. McMahon, co-chairman; Joseuhine T. Kelly, M. J. Willcoxon, Frank Weikel, Frank Fenton, William H. Howlin, Martha Ford, Florence C. Thorne, S. B. Woolls, W. C. Hushing, Robert Watt, Boris Shiskin and Leo C. DeThierry.

Gifts, Candles Usher in Feast Of Chanukka

Synagogues to Hold Special Services Tomorrow, Saturday

Jewish families last night unwrapped gifts by the soft glow of candlelight, as the Feast of Chanukka was ushered in throughout the Nation's Capital.

Following an age-old custom, they kindled one flame, and exchanged small gifts—especially for children—between families. Many indicated the joyousness of the occasion with games, and dainties for the table.

Each night until next Thursday the faithful will light an additional candle, symbolizing the oil which burned miraculously for eight days in the Temple at Jerusalem after the overthrow of Syrian rule in 165 B. C.

Also known as the "Feast of Lights," the celebration falls on the twenty-fifth day of Kislev, the ninth month of the Jewish year, and will be marked by special services in synagogues tomorrow night and Saturday morning.

One of the principal services will be centered at the Washington Hebrew Temple, where Dr. Hugo Schiff, Jewish rabbi of Alexandria, Va., will speak Saturday morning at 10:45 a. m. Rabbi Norman Gerstenfeld, leader of the congregation, will preach over WJSV from 10 to 10:30 p. m. on "The Meaning of Chanukka."

Tifereth Israel, Beth Sholom, Adas Israel, Ohev Sholom, Southeast Hebrew, Yom Tov, Talmud Torah, Beth El, Ezras Israel, B'nai Israel, Kosher Israel and other orthodox congregations will hold appropriate rites tomorrow night and Saturday morning.

Wife of Iron Lung Patient Gets Job With Store Here

Mrs. Tacie Cooke, valiantly trying to keep her home intact while her 28-year-old husband, William, faces a long fight in the "iron lung" at Gallinger Hospital, is being helped to help herself.

Yesterday she was working at her new job at Woodward & Lothrop's where the salary will help keep her two young daughters, Betty Ann and Willa Mae, with her while their father, a Capital Transit Co. bus driver, is attempting to conquer infantile paralysis. He was stricken three weeks ago.

Numerous contributions and offers of assistance have been received at the Cooke home, 1729 Bay street southeast, since The Post depicted the family's desperate plight last week, but the job was best of all, according to Mrs. Cooke's mother, Mrs. Elizabeth Bair.

The latter minds Betty Ann and Willa Mae while their mother works as a package wrapper.

One of the contributions received yesterday was a dollar bill from a Boy Scout, extracted from his Christmas gift fund.

Cooke is doing as well as can be expected, it was said at the hospital yesterday.

Hurdles Overcome By 3 Little Words

BARBARA BOSSINGER, of Little Rock, Ark., was happy today because love had found a way for her to marry Frances R. Suits, Harvard law student and Rhodes scholar. Suits was ill when she arrived in Cambridge for the marriage, and doctors forbade a bedside ceremony. She had to return home by Sunday, but State law requiries five days' notice of marriage. All's well now, because Suits will be out of the hospital by Sunday and a classmate won permission to file, by proxy, the necessary marriage intentions

Dividing Road Reduces Fatal Crashes 83%

New Jersey Engineer Reports Result to Research Council

By splitting a 10.5-mile four-lane highway into two separate one-way, two-lane roads in New Jersey, fatal accidents were reduced 83.3 per cent, Arnold H. Vey, traffic engineer of the New Jersey Motor Vehicle Commission, told the highway research board of the National Research Council yesterday.

Meeting at the National Academy of Sciences, the board devoted yesterday and Tuesday to departmental sessions. Today and tomorrow the board will hold its annual meeting, with the annual dinner tonight at the Washington Hotel.

The divided highway, Vey said, also reduced nonfatal accidents 48 per cent and accidents in which property damage alone resulted 17.6 per cent. All accidents, he said, were reduced 40.4 per cent.

Throughout the State, in the same period, total accidents increased 6.7 per cent, while the increase in fatal accidents was 21.4 per cent and in nonfatal injuries, 5.3 per cent. While these changes were occuring, Vey said, traffic in the State, as measured by gasoline sales, increased 44 per cent.

Cost of dividing the highway, he added, was about $50,000 a mile, which would be paid for, in savings in accident costs, in three years.

Most effective method of marking no-passing zones on two lane highways, Harry E. O'Neal, chairman of the Ohio State higmway department, said, is to place a yellow line on the right of the white center line. Reporting for a committee, he said this device and others had been checked by speed tests, observance studies and through questionnaires sent to drivers.

'Poor Man' Kills Himself by Gas

Ralph DeLapp, 48, unemployed carpenter, killed himself with illuminating gas yesterday in his room at 222 Indiana avenue northwest.

He was found by another roomer, John Lester. A note addressed to his wife was found in the room. Lester said he made the remark Tuesday "that the world is no place for a poor man." Coroner A. Magruder MacDonald issued a certificate of suicide.

Roosevelt Acts To Give Finns Food, Credit

Sends Invaded Land Expression of Hope It Will Survive

By William V. Nessly
Post Staff Writer

Material American aid for the war-engulfed Finnish people was being mobilized by President Roosevelt and his aides last night.

Earlier in the day the President cabled what amounted to an expression of hope that the Finns would prevail over their Russian invaders.

From this country's vast stocks of food and other supplies, the President was hoping to send sufficient quantities to alleviate distress and stiffen the morale of the invaded republic's populace.

He called into conference yesterday Jesse H. Jones, Federal loan administrator, to canvass with him the possibilities of financing such shipments through the Export-Import Bank or another lending agency. In addition, he discussed with Norman H. Davis, chairman of the American Red Cross, that organization's extensive steps to date to assist the Finnish people, and its plans to augment the assistance.

Though he had recently ignored the twenty-second anniversary of the Soviet state Mr. Roosevelt yesterday observed the twenty-second anniversary of the Finnish nation's independence by cabling to President Kyosti Kallio:

"This anniversary on which the Finnish people recall with pride the achievement of their independence gives me yet another welcome occasion to voice the whole hearted esteem felt for them and for their government by the people and the government of the United States.

"It is my earnest hope that these tragic days may not be long in giving way to a happier era to permit the Finnish people to continue untroubled steady development of their free political and social institutions which have aroused the admiration of the American people."

Reflecting increasing Congressional anger over the Soviets' attack, Senator Mead (Democrat), of New York, announced he would offer legislation authorizing the Treasury to turn over to the Red Cross for use in aiding the Finns the entire $234,693 Finnish debt payment due December 15.

Hook to Draft Law

President Roosevelt on Tuesday had said the payment would be placed in a suspended account in the Treasury until Congress could be asked to authorize its use for benefit of the Finnish people. He indicated similar authorization might be asked for the Finns' payment of the last four or five years.

Representative Hook (Democrat), of Michigan, said he intended to draft legislation that would turn over to Finland herself the payments she has made.

"We must crystallize," Mead said, "the unlimited moral support which we owe to this little suffering nation into a practical reality. Not only must we stretch forth our hands in a gesture of friendship but our hands must be filled with something substantial to help alleviate the anguish and hardships brought about by the invasion."

Johnson Demands Break

Senator Johnson (Republican), of California, said at Los Angeles that "we should sever diplomatic relations with Russia," though conceding there was no chance to "save Finland."

Senator Borah (Republican), of Idaho, warned again, however, against any diplomatic break and criticized those "who would stampede the President into this action."

Davis said, after his White House conference, that the Red Cross had appropriated $25,000 for Finnish relief, had already sent from London by airplane a shipment of medicines, was preparing to send a shipload of relief materials from New York.

Ambulance and medical supplies are reported to be badly needed.

5 Agencies Lose Permits

The State Department announced that while 195 individuals and organizations have been licensed to collect funds here for charitable distribution in the belligerent countries, the licenses of five organizations had been caneceled for failure to observe regulations.

Two of the five were reinstated following promises to comply.

Those whose licenses were revoked permanently were:

Walter Colanski and Edmund P. Krotkievicz, co-partners of Polish Radio Programs Bureau, Hamtramck, Mich.; Connecticut Radio Bureau, Meriden, Conn.; Association Franco-Americaine des Parrains et Marraines de Guerre des U. S. A., Washington, D. C.

Those whose registrations were reinstated:

The Polish relief fund committee, of Passaic and Bergen counties, Passaic, N. J., and United Reading Appeal for Polish War Sufferers, Reading, Pa.

Eleven other persons and organizations asked for revocation of their registrations.

'... No Power Great Enough to Kill the Finnish Spirit!'

Finnish-Americans gathered around Minister Hjalmar Procope in the drawing room of the Finnish Legation last night to commemorate the twenty-second anniversary of their country's independence. They answered with cheers when Minister Procope stood on a chair to declare "There is no power great enough to kill the Finnish spirit" the gathering long before Procope emerged from his office. Scattered reports of British and even German aid for Finland traveled from one room to the next.

Finns Cheer Hopeful News at Independence Party Here

Tense quiet fell over the crowd when Procope and Military Attache Col. Per Zilliacus, in forest-green, medal-weighted uniform reappeared among the guests.

A pianist played from the tone poem of Sibelius, "Finlandia." The minister began speaking, in Finnish, of "our country's hour of travail."

"Our country has been attacked in barbaric fashion," he declared. "But remember Finland has survived before. No matter how great the barbarian hordes, the Finnish spirit has never been conquered."

"Long Live Finland"

"With God's help," he said, "the Finnish spirit will never die. And God will help."

There was a moment's hush when he finished, and tears came to many eyes. Then there were shouts of "Long Live Finland"—from the throats of white-haired women, from men who fought for their country's independence in 1917-18 and from a younger generation that knows Finland only in the stories of its elders.

Twenty-five members of the Finnish colony in Newark, Del., came to Washington by bus to join nearly 100 Finnish-Americans of Washington for the anniversary.

From Muncie, Ind., came John Udel to give $100 to aid Finnish civilians. "Muncie is supposed to be the typical American city," he said, "and I'm the only Finn there."

Other contributions yesterday brought the fund to nearly $1,000. August Nikula, of 4650 Warren street northwest, president of the Finnish Society of Washington, is in charge of collections.

"Hot Reception" for Russians

"The Russians say they are making a friendly call on us," he observed, "and I think we are giving them a hot reception. If we can get powder and planes, we can hold them off a long time."

Guests arriving at the legation last night were greeted by the minister with the traditional Finnish word of welcome, "Tervetuloa." In the dining room they found Finnish pastries, coffee and two birthday cakes, iced in blue and white, the national colors.

The reception brought legation attaches their only respite from the strain of an 18-hour working day. Minister Procope was roused at 1 a. m. yesterday for a telephone conversation with Helsinki. In the day he issued two formal statements to the press, conferred with Acting Secretary of State Welles and received the diplomats of other Scandinavian nations, who called with good wishes for the Finnish anniversary.

Procope's statement recalled that "it was on December 6, 1917, that our people declared their freedom from the Russian bolsheviks and created probably the closest counterpart of the American republic that exists in the world."

The minister expressed deep gratitude to the American Red Cross for its efforts to aid Finland and to former President Herbert Hoover for his offer to organize relief activities there.

"I hope we shall be able to carry on in orderly and friendly manner our relations with the great republic of the United States," he said, "and that the American people will understand that if our words of thanks are inadequate, our hearts are full of gratitude."

British Scout North Germany

Berlin, Dec. 6 (U.P.).—British planes tonight flew over the Frisian Islands and Schleswig-Holstein, Germany's northernmost province and site of Kiel naval base, the official German news agency announced.

No bombs were dropped, the announcement said.

"At several points, anti-aircraft fire forced the Englishmen to turn northward," DNB said. "The enemy, according to incontrovertible evidence, flew north of Flensburg over Danish territory."

4 Nations Claim Polish Material

Copyright by New York Times

Bucharest, Dec. 6.—Germany, Russia, England and France all are claiming payment from the Rumanian government for some 40 airplanes and 800 military trucks which the Polish refugee army took with it in its flight and which were confiscated by Rumania.

The Germans were the first to claim payment, followed by the Russians, who demanded half of the sum due. Now Britain and France have entered the picture, saying Poland owes them for raw materials supplied by the two allies before the war.

U. S. to Insist On Its Rights In Ship Halting

Lines Refusing Cargoes Without Navicerts Warned of 1917 Laws

By William B. Ardery,
Associated Press Staff Writer

State and Treasury Department officials indicated yesterday that the Government intended to protect its rights under international law even though this course might mean expense and delay to American shipping lines.

The question of American shipping rights arose informally in connection with Great Britain's navicert system—a policy under which British consulates issue naval certificates showing that American exports to neutral countries are not objectionable.

The system was designed to expedite the flow of American commerce through the British contraband patrol to neutral countries—and to save time and trouble for the patrol. In most cases, it would permit a shipmaster carrying a cargo completely covered by navicerts to pass quickly through the patrol.

1917 Statute Cited

There were reports that some shipping lines, anxious to avoid the expensive delays involved when their vessels were ordered into port for inspection, would refuse to accept unnavicerted shipments.

Regarding this as an infringement on rights of American exporters and the Nation's maritime rights, the Treasury called attention to a 1917 statute permitting it to refuse sailing privileges to any vessel whose master declined to accept freight in good condition whe had space accommodations.

Officials said yesterday that the law had been quoted specifically to one company, and that others would be warned if they declined to accept unnavicerted cargoes. If shipping lines should still require navicerts on all shipments, it was said, then their vessels would not be allowed to leave American ports.

48 U. S. Ships Detained

Reports from New York said that the American Export Line would require navicerts on all shipments to Italian and Spanish ports beginning December 15.

The Italian line reported it would demand navicerts beginning December 15.

The Black Diamond line said it was suggesting that its shippers obtain navicerts.

Between September 1 and November 17, the State Department reported 48 cases in which belligerents detained American ships. The detentions, averaging eight days each, were attributed to Great Britain, responsible for 33; France, 10; Germany, four, and an unidentified vessel one.

Ship owners have contended that such delays may bring spoilage of cargoes, and prevent fulfillment of contracts.

Questioned about the situation, officials called attention to a State Department declaration that it could indorse no principle involving the sacrifice of American rights under international law.

Chinese Girl Laments Waste Of Nation's Woman Power

Catherine Yeh has comforted refugee children in China, has watched air battles between Chinese and Japanese, clung to her dream of what she and her political science will do for her country some day.

The 22-year-old Chinese girl, who came here recently to work toward her master's degree at George Washington University, put down her political science book yesterday to lend her assistance to plans for a Christmas bazaar for the benefit of refugees. The Washington Committee for Aid to China is sponsoring the bazaar December 9-17.

KATHERINE YEH

But even as she handled ancient embroidered silks and art objects she said: "I want to get a position in the Chinese government and help open the way for more Chinese women to get an education. There is much—how do you say it?—woman power going to waste, because many women have stayed too closely in their own homes. There are many things waiting for women to do. They'll be needed to help rebuild the country."

She has stark memories of the destruction. Her school, Kwanhau University in Shanghai, was destroyed by Japanese bombardment in vacation, she said, and the students moved classes to Chengtu. Only last week her brother wrote her that one side of their home in Cheking had been bombed, but the family has escaped injury so far.

Working with a Chinese women's committee, she was in an automobile carrying food and clothing to some soldiers when a shell exploded in the road just where the car had passed.

But the refugees—she wanted to talk about them, instead of her own narrow escapes. She was chairman of a student group which helped to teach 200 refugee children.

"I remember one little boy who cried all the time. He was one of eight children in the family, but all the others and the father and mother, too, had been killed," she said.

Miss Yeh, who is staying at 1742 Park road northwest, came to this country three months ago, intending to study here for two years. She is the daughter of a Chinese government official.

The bazaar will be held at the Thornhill Studio, 1517 Wisconsin avenue northwest, from next Saturday through December 17, from 10 a. m. to 10 p. m. It will benefit the Chinese Industrial Cooperatives which are seeking to give refugees new work and to supply goods which are scarce because of the destruction or capture of factories.

McDowell Charges U. S. Services Used To Boost McNutt

By the Associated Press

Representative McDowell (Republican), of Pennsylvania, asserted yesterday a government publication and Government services had been used to promote the Presidential campaign of Administrator Paul V. McNutt of the Federal Security Agency.

McDowell disclosed he had telegraphed President Roosevelt that publication and mailing under Government frank of an article by McNutt was, if not illegal, in certain bad taste."

He referred to a reprint of McNutt's editorial, "To American Educators," which appeared in the October issue of School Life, monthly publication of the office of education, which is a part of the security agency.

The article, said McDowell, outlined "The Educational and Political Policies" of McNutt.

C. F. Klinefelter, assistant to the commissioner of education, said the latter statement "is rather astonishing to me."

"Since this was a rather significant article on education in a democracy," Klinefelter said, 7,000 reprints were issued.

Scarred German Duelist Seized In D. C. as 'Spy Scare' Fades

A scarred German duelist was arrested here yesterday while a Nazi "spy scare" dissolved into nothing worse than a half-dozen homesick German sailors trying to sail their way to the Reich.

While police of three jurisdictions were seeking Frederick K. B. Barnum, alias Frantz Karl Bueb, 23, on a fugitive warrant which charged his passport visa had expired, he was apprehended by immigration inspectors. He was lodged in District Jail.

Efforts of Washington police to locate Barnum were thwarted Tuesday when his automobile was discovered near Seventeenth and Buchanan streets northwest, police said. A "plant" was established but the wanted man failed to appear and his automobile was impounded.

As for the "spies," the Government said six Germans picked up Tuesday by the Coast Guard off Wilmington, N. C., were wanted under a 1918 law requiring nationals of a belligerent country leaving the United States to contact belligerent vessels to supply bond. Government agencies, including the Justice Department, had known of the projected voyage a month, it was disclosed, and the sailors had been questioned at least three times before being permitted to sail in their 43-foot yawl, only to be picked up again at Wilmington.

Russians Ask Early Treaty With Rumania

Communist Organ Flays Allies, U. S. As War-Makers

By G. E. R. Gedye
Copyright by New York Times

Moscow, Dec. 6.—An article in today's official organ of the Comintern—The Communist International—calls for immediate conclusion of a Soviet-Rumanian pact similar to those concluded between Russia and the various Baltic states.

The article describes as the "war incendiaries" the Anglo-French bourgeoisie, supported by the United States financial oligarchy, seeking to extend the war and trying under the guise of the creation of a "neutral bloc" to draw in the Balkan states and especially Rumania, against Germany and ultimately against the Soviet Union.

Communist International also carried articles denouncing Turkey and the "imperialistic" British and French rule in India and Syria.

"Workers' Struggle" Cited

"The political and economic situation in Rumania," the Communist organ asserted, "makes it vitally necessary for the peoples inhabiting Rumania to establish most friendly relations with the Soviet Union . . .

"The Rumanian workers have struggled and will continue to struggle against the exploitation and oppression of the peoples of the minorities in Rumania and for their right to self-determination, including the right of separation from Rumania."

In urging the Rumanian Communist Party to intensify its efforts, it said only a mutual assistance pact with Russia can prevent Rumania from becoming involved in a "second imperialist war."

Another article accused Britain and France of trying "to widen the death dealing radius of war on the Balkan Peninsula to create a military front against Germany."

Turkey Is Warned

"They desire to convert Turkey into a strategic base in order to realize this plan," it added. "The position which the Turkish government is now taking presents a colossal danger for Turkey."

Great Britain and France on April 13 pledged Rumania their military aid in event of aggression threatening Rumania's indepedence.

The pledge to Rumania followed similar commitments of Anglo-French military aid to Poland and Greece.

The Allies also have concluded a tripower mutual aid pact with Turkey, signed after Russia's failure to obtain a Soviet-Turkish pact which would have closed the Dardanelles to British and French ships.

Thus, any Russian blow at Rumania might bring the Soviet Union to war with Britain and France.

Italy Might Get In

Furthermore, Italy might take quick action in event of a direct Russian menace to Rumania because authoritative Fascist spokesmen in Rome in recent days have warned that a Russian move in the Balkans, such as those in the Baltic, would bring prompt Italian intervention.

The Anglo-French military pledges to Rumania last April were designed primarily against German aggression.

Yesterday, Fuehrer Hitler's newspaper Voelkischer Beobachter said Russia's sphere of influence lies in Southeastern Europe toward Syria, Turkey, Egypt and Trans-Caucasia.

The Communist International laid stress upon alleged Rumanian persecution of minorities in provinces taken from Russia, Hungary and Bulgaria after the world war.

Rumania acquired Bessarabia from Russia, which never has accepted the transfer. From the old Austro-Hungarian Empire Rumania acquired Transylvania, source of constant trouble between Bucharest and Budapest, and from Bulgaria, the Rumanians took Dobrudja.

"Conditions in Bessarabia are particularly unbearable," the Communist organ said

Rumanians Not Interested

Bucharest, Dec. 6 (AP).—Official Rumanian quarters today exhibited scant interest in a Communist suggestion in Moscow that Rumania sign a mutual assistance pact with the Soviet Union immediately

The suggestion was attributed to a Bulgarian Communist who is now in Russia, rather than to Soviet officialdom.

Foreign diplomats, while doubting that Russia would bring serious pressure to bear on Rumania before the Finnish campaign is completed, expressed belief Rumania might yield somewhat under great pressure.

Nazi Consul's Aide Beaten to Death

30 English Planes Ready For Finland

By International News Service

London, Dec. 6.—Thirty British fighting planes, the first consignment of an undetermined number which British firms have agreed to supply to Finland, were ready to be flown to that country tonight, according to authoritative London circles.

The planes will be followed by other war supplies, these circles revealed, principally ammunition for artillery and automatic arms which have played an important part in the successes claimed against the Soviet army.

Coincident with disclosure of British war material shipments to the Finns, it was stated authoritatively that Germany had offered the Finns new rifles, at prices lower than Nazi arms already sent to Finland.

Whitehall circles expressed the opinion that Britain, like Italy, will permit sale of war materials to the vastly outnumbered Finnish forces without official sanction, and will refrain from placing any obstacles in the path of their delivery.

The British fighting planes, added to 60 Italian bombers which arrived in Helsinki within the last 48 hours, were regarded in London circles as a definite aid to the Finnish defense against the Red army hordes, but still far short of matching the 1,500 planes the Soviet army is understood to have.

Italian technicians and training pilots were reported to have accompanied the 60 bombing planes to prepare them for immediate action.

British Claim Successes in War on U-Boats

Nazis Can't Build Them Fast Enough, Churchill Asserts

By Robert Bunnelle.
Associated Press Staff Writer

London, Dec. 6.—Destruction of Nazi submarines faster than Germany could replace them was reported today by First Lord of the Admiralty Winston Churchill to the House of Commons.

He said five enemy U-boats were believed sunk by the British navy last week.

Declaring two to four German undersea craft were being sunk each week, Churchill announced Britain had tripled her submarine hunting fleet since the war started and that nearly 1,000,000 tons of new warships of all classes were being rushed to completion.

Mine Protection Cited

He said also counter-measures against Nazi magnetic mines were in an advanced stage before the first ones were sown.

The day saw these other developments:

The 7,384-ton German liner Ussukuma was reported captured by British warships in the South Atlantic; the 8,196-ton British steamer Huntsman, long overdue, was given up for lost, and the 542-ton Lithuanian freighter Kretinga was reported seized by a German warship in the Baltic.

German planes, presumed by the air ministry to be minelayers, put in an appearance over the Thames Estuary but the Royal Air Force reported driving them off. One crashed off Sheringham, Norfolk.

Plane Over Orkneys

A Nazi warplane was detected over the Orkneys, north of Scotland, and enemy planes were reported over northern Scotland, but no bombs were dropped.

The ministry of economic warfare announced the cargoes of 110 neutral ships, including six American, had been considered by the British contraband control board during the the week ended December 2. A total of 735,000 tons of contraband intended for Germany has been detained by the Allies since the beginning of the war, it was announced.

The House of Commons voted approval of the government's conduct of the war, 303 to 125. The vote was on Labor criticism of the government's organization of manpower and resources.

Churchill told the House the five German submarines believed sunk were the object of attacks "either from our flotillas or from the Royal Air Force and particularly the coastal commands." He added the results "are independent of any achieved by the French navy."

Doubts Production Claims

If Germany is able to turn out 400 submarines next year—as Germans have said she could— "and also produces captains and crews by the chain belt system," the admiralty head declared, "it seems likely that our rate of destruction might undergo similar expansion."

More than 1,000 British merchant ships have been marked for defense, he said, and added that there would be 2,000 soon.

The Magnetic mine, he said, may be "Hitler's much-vaunted secret weapon. It is certainly a characterisitc weapon and one that no doubt will ever be associated with his name."

Finns Celebrate Independence While Fighting for Liberty

By the Associated Press

Helsinki, Dec. 6.—Embattled Finland celebrated the twenty-second anniversary of her independence today with the country anxiously awaiting an expected new blow from Russia.

President Kyosti Kallio, in an independence day speech, told Finns they could "absolutely trust" their army to fulfill its "heroic duty," and he asked them to remember that they were defending not only their homes but western civilization. He said:

"Let's ring forth on this independence day, throughout the land, stronger than ever before, the 400-year-old hymn of Luther so familiar to all our people, 'A Mighty Fortress Is Our God.'"

Declaring that Finland has always been "the defensive wall" of western civilization in the north, Kallio added:

"The Finnish people await expectantly to see whether other nations will tolerate the destruction aimed against us."

Aid in defense came to Finland from the weather. A new snowfall in the south brought "white-out" protection against air raiders and gave crack Finnish skiing units of machine gunners and infantrymen a distinct advantage.

Finland also received encouragement, especially noted by Finnish officials, in a message from President Roosevelt expressing his "earnest hope" that Russian-Finnish hostilities would end soon and that Finland might continue her development "untroubled."

President Kallio and his government held their annual diplomatic reception. When the American message was read over the radio "The Star-Spangled Banner" was played. United States Minister H. F. Arthur Schoenfeld expressed his best wishes to President Kallio.

The German Minister was among those at the diplomatic reception. Also present was Juhu Kusti Paasikivi, Finnish diplomat, his appearance spiking reports that he had left for Moscow to discuss the hostilities.

(It was said in Moscow that Finnish Legation officials there, after having been in virtual isolation, would entrain for Stockholm Thursday by way of Riga and Berlin.)

President Kallio reviewed the events preceding invasion.

"Against our will and without being at fault, we have become the object of attack by our eastern neighbor, the Soviet Union. History repeats itself. During hundreds of years, our people have received fate's heaviest blows from the same source.

Kallio reviewed the Russian demands upon Finland, saying the Russians had asked concessions of areas which "for centuries, generation after generation, have been tilled and cultivated by Finns who have never threatened the safety of Leningrad or the peace of Russia."

Kallio said the whole world realizes that the original question was not the security of Leningrad, as Russia alleged, since the attack had been made all along the frontier from Petsamo, in the Arctic, to Rajajcki and Hankoniemi, in the south.

"Our peaceful towns have been bombed," he said, "women and children and other civilians killed, not to speak of those victims claimed by the defense of our borders.

"It looks as though that mighty power wants to rob us of the independence which that nation itself recognized, and with it all that is sacred and dear to us."

New York, Dec. 6.—Joseph P. Kennedy, American Ambassador to Britain, arrived aboard the Dixie Clipper today on his way to Washington, where he will confer tomorrow with President Roosevelt and Secretary Hull on the European situation.

"I want to tell them some things that it might not be wise to put on the cables," Kennedy said.

Kennedy, who has not seen the President since last February, said he had conferred recently with George A. Gordon, American Minister to the Netherlands; Joseph E. Davies, Ambassador to Belgium, and William C. Bullitt, Ambassador to France.

U. S. Bewilders Britons

The British government understands the American position on neutrality, Kennedy said, and it "does not have the slightest belief that this country will get into this war in any way." He explained, however, that the man in the street in England was a bit bewildered by America's stand.

"They find it difficult," the Ambassador said, "to comprehend how we can sympathize with their cause and not take part in it. To them, it is like sticking out your tongue at a person and yet not being willing to punch him in the nose."

He said British morale was excellent and the recent unrestricted mining of ships by Germany in the North Sea had caused "everybody to get tougher." London night life is booming, he said, variety shows are crowded and night clubs are mobbed.

Plans to Look at Lights

"It's a great sensation to walk from the outside at night, where it's as black as the inside of a topper, and then go into a building and see the lights blazing," he said. "I'm going to put in some nights in Times Square just looking at the lights."

Kennedy said emphatically that he would not be a candidate for the Democratic Presidential nomination next year, and added that he did not intend to enter politics again. He said he did not plan to resign as Ambassador, and that he presumed his tenure would be "for the duration."

"This is my last public job," he continued. "I'm going to watch my family grow up in the next five years."

Kennedy said he would go to Boston early next week to visit relatives. He plans to pass the Christmas holidays with his family either in their home in Bronxville, N. Y., or Palm Beach, after which he will return to London.

Poll Tax Received Until December 10

Although the deadline for payment of State capitation and income taxes without penalty fell on Monday, Alexandria voters have until December 10 to pay their taxes to qualify for the April primary, City Treasurer Roger C. Sullivan announced yesterday. State law requires the capitation taxes be paid at least six months before the election.

Happy Reunion for the Kennedys

Joseph P. Kennedy, U. S. Ambassador to the Court of St. James's, returning home for a short stay, arrived in New York from London yesterday aboard the Dixie Clipper. Mrs. Kennedy was there to meet him. Ambassador Kennedy scoffed at the idea that he is a Democratic Presidential possibility and that he planned to quit his post. He said he would return to England after the Christmas holidays

Dies May Call Trotsky on Soviet Inroads

By the Associated Press

Orange, Tex., Dec. 6.—Exiled Leon Trotsky and Diego Rivera, leftist Mexican muralist, may come to Texas in a few days to testify on Communist inroads in Latin-America, Chairman Martin Dies (Democrat), of Texas, of the House Un-Americanism Committee, disclosed today.

If permission can be obtained from the State Department for Trotsky to enter the United States, a committee hearing will be held before January 3, probably on the Mexican border.

Dies' secretary, Robert E. Stripling, said the hearing would be aimed at authenticating documents obtained by committee investigators who have conferred with the exiled Russian and Rivera. One document purportedly discloses Soviet instructions to its agents in Mexico aimed at giving all belligerent nations access to Mexico's oil resources.

The purpose of this policy, Stripling suggested, would be the ultimate destruction of western nations through warfare, after which the Stalin government could extend its power. Trotsky and Stalin have been bitter foes for years. The present Soviet dictator exiled his enemy after the death of Lenin.

"The committee has no intention of becoming a sounding-board for Trotsky and his theories," Stripling said, "but we know he has access to accurate information on the work of Communists in Mexico and other countries . . ."

"The Communists, our information indicates, are making a concerted effort in Mexico and their plans to spread from there to other countries seem to constitute a threat to our peace and security."

Chairman Dies is under physicians' orders to rest for 30 days. The chairman said, however, he might have to disregard the orders in order to conduct the hearing.

Zoning Fee Reduced On Pleas for Additions

The Commissioners yesterday reduced from $20 to $5 the fee required of persons who ask permission to make additions to single family dwellings which do not conform to the zoning regulations.

Col. Batista Quits Army, Will Run For President

Havana, Cuba, Dec. 6 (U.P.).—Col. Batista, Cuba's "strong man," today retired to private life after six years as chief of staff and in a farewell address to the armed forces announced his candidacy for president in elections February 28, 1940.

Batista, who rose to power in the "sergeants' revolt" of September, 1933, a fortnight after the overthrow of President Machado, was succeeded as head of the army by Col. Jose E. Pedraza y Cabrera.

Batista appealed to the government's civil branches and the army, navy and police to uphold the electoral code and guarantee fair elections for president.

"I hope to triumph in the elections," he said, "but I do not want to be elected if my election would be bad for Cuba. We are not going to seek greater advantages or rights than those granted to parties opposing us."

Danes Walk Out of Parliament As Protest Against Russia

Communist Leader Finds Only Two Members of His Party to Hear Speech; Nazi Chief Urges Relations Be Broken

By the Associated Press

Copenhagen, Dec. 6.—Members of the Danish Parliament walked out of the lower chamber in an anti-Communist demonstration today and a Nazi member suggested that Denmark break off diplomatic relations with Russia.

When the Communist leader, Axel Larsen, rose to speak, members of all parties, from Conservatives to the Social Democrats, departed, leaving only two Communist members to listen.

When normal deliberations were resumed, a Nazi member asked Prime Minister Stauning if he did not think it was high time to sever diplomatic relations with Russia, indicating all Nazis do not approve of Germany's present relationship with Moscow. Stauning answered no.

Gustaf Sends Sympathy

Stockholm, Dec. 6 (AP).—King Gustaf messaged Sweden's "sympathy to Finland's sorely afflicted people" today on the occasion of Finnish independence day as Swedes in Stockholm staged demonstrations for Finland.

Educators and military men spoke of the need for help to Finland in a meeting attended by 6,000 persons in Stockholm.

A crowd cheered Finland and Sweden as Richard Sandler, Swedish foreign minister, departed for Oslo to consider the Russian-Finnish conflict problems with the foreign ministers of Norway and Denmark.

'Blackout' Is Asked

Copyright by New York Times

Stockholm, Dec. 6.—The Swedish government has been requested by Finland to black out the border city of Haparanda, as lights there might guide enemy fliers to Torneaa and Kemi.

Planes Believed Flown Over Reich to Finns

Military authorities here expressed the opinion yesterday that the reported delivery of 60 Italian warplanes to Finland must have been made across German territory, and with Hitler's permission and approval.

It was suggested in some quarters that the planes might have been flown to Rumania for refueling and thence to a Finnish base, flying at very high altitude across the Russian-occupied portion of Poland. Other experts, however, doubted that Mussolini would be willing to risk having the planes forced down or discovered in Soviet territory, and pointed out that high altitude flying requires special and expensive equipment which ordinarily would not be installed on each plane.

The possibility of the planes being flown via France, the low countries, over the North and Baltic Seas and Scandinavia was scouted. Not only would this involve securing permission of a number of countries and run the chance of being attacked by Allied or German planes and anti-aircraft guns, but the flight would certainly have been seen and reported en route, all agree.

On the other hand, informed persons here believe the Nazis would not be at all averse to giving permission for the planes to cross Germany. Russian conquest of the Baltic states is decidedly against German interests and Hitler would be glad to oppose Stalin in ways short of direct action, these authorities hold.

Dewey Hits New Deal 'Defeatism'

Urges Faith in U. S. In Opening Drive for G. O. P. Nomination

licans and Democrats who do not think that our country can win through. We have Europeans and Americans who do not think that civilization can win through. I am not ashamed to confess the abiding faith that our party, our country and the world will win through."

He declared, then, that "everything depends" on the solution of what he had termed the "crisis of faith," adding:

"If here we can rout defeatism, if here we can regain courage and unbounded activity, if here we can unite industry and agriculture and labor for an invincible America, then and only then, can we contribute to the peace of all the world's people."

Jobs Still Primary Task

The country's "massive problems," he remarked, could not be "wished away by singing 'Happy Days Are Here Again,'" and then he went on:

"When President Roosevelt was inaugurated, he said: 'our greatest primary task is to put people to work.' He defined the issue, but has failed to find the solution. After seven years, putting people to work is still our greatest primary task.

"One person out of every five employable persons in this country is today unemployed. The great, unanswered question is: What keeps him out of work.

"Some people say he does not want to work. That is a vicious slander on the American people . . . unemployed capital today is about the same as it has always been. It will go to work, if it can find a place to work with a reasonable chance of not losing both its job and itself.

"I say to you that both capital and labor want work, that both detest idleness. We are going to get exactly nowhere telling lies and libels about one another. We have been getting nowhere for seven years, telling lies an libels about each other.

". . . what keeps the unemployed man out of a job?

"The New Deal has a committee called the temporary national economic committee. . . . its temporary national economic committee this year reports as follows: 'the American economic machine is stalled on dead center.'

"After seven years of lending and spending, seven years of priming the pump, seven years of pushing the accelerator down to the floor on more and more public spending, seven years of warming up the cylinders of the machine with more than 22 billion dollars of new national public debt—after seven years wait does the New Deal repair crew tell us? It admits defeat.

"It says: 'The American economic machine is stalled on dead center.' . . . This New Deal repair crew does not believe in this machine. It believes in public spending . . . Does it believe in those absolutely necessary, new, great adventurous private enterprises that create jobs?"

Y. M. C. A. Survey Cited

Dewey said a survey by the Young Men's Christian Association showed "80 per cent of the young men and women believe that ability no longer offers assurance of success in America.

"The philosophy of despair is, indeed, taking root. What the New Deal means to them is that it would have been better had they never been born.

". . . The President has said we have a rendezvous with destiny. We seem to be on our way toward a rendezvous with despair.

"Fellow Republicans, as a party, let us turn away from that rendezvous, and let us start going in the other direction and start now. The one ultimate unforgivable crime is to despair of the republic. The one essential to the survival of the republic is to know it will survive and will survive into a future that is always larger, always better . . .

"Here is the final answer to the defeatism of the New Deal. All history proves it is wrong.

Holds Promises Unfulfilled

". . . Society has a permanent, deep-rooted obligation to its aged, its blind, its sick, its unemployed. But it is not enough to say no one shall starve. It is a cruel illusion to pass laws which are a mere promise without also taking measures necessary to the fulfillment of that promise. The present Administration has thought it well enough to make the promise, leaving the performance to come from the savings of the last generation, achieved under Republican administrations, and mortgaging the earnings of the next generation, which also will be under Republican administrations.

"Our obligation—and I say ours because the Democratic Administration has failed—is to start producing the goods and earning the money so that those promises can be fulfilled. Our first task is to sweep away the obstacles to that fulfillment. There is only one source of real money in any free country, and that is private enterprise, the enterprise of the farmer, the worker and the businessman. It is our first, our primary, task to create the conditions under which this enterprise can go to work.

"Until we first make up our minds that this is our purpose, there is no use discussing particular problems.

". . . There is a force in America that has been held in check which, once released, can give us the employment that we need. It has nothing to do with slick monetary schemes. It has nothing to do with slick economic panaceas. This force is the energy of American enterprise, great and small.

". . . Government hostility, repressive taxation and economic quackery have kept this force from going to work. Our firm resolve must be to give it a chance and to encourage enterprise. Nor does this involve tolerance of abuses in business or in any other element of society. Where there are abuses in business, it is the function of government to correct them as they arise.

"But we can cure abuses in business without creating abuses by government.

". . . . Shall it be said that all we can do from now on is to administer the achievements we already have? I do not say No temperately. I say No with resentment and anger. The one thing I want to do, in whatever way I can, is to help make the courage of eternal youth run once more in the veins of my party and of my country."

the Oxbow Chapter in Vermont and was its honorary regent until her death.

She has edited the National Historical Magazine since September, 1937, and was responsible for its present name. When she accepted the editorship she announced her ambition to make it into a publication of national historical importance that would have a circulation wider than the D. A. R. membership.

Friction between the D. A. R. governing board and Mrs. Keyes has been accumulating since last spring. She submitted her resignation last April, it was revealed last night, but withdrew it because Mrs. Robert asked her to reconsider and because of her long D. A. R. connections, which she hesitated to break.

Three reasons for being "deeply sorry" to tender the resignation were given by Mrs. Keyes, whose latest book, "The Great Tradition," is now on best seller lists throughout the country. Her mother's early work for the society and her own participation, which she declared she had heretofore regarded as "a privilege and an opportunity" were given as two.

Mrs. Robert was characterized by Mrs. Keyes as having "personally always been kind and fair to me."

Mrs. Keyes returned to Washington from Europe in October.

Questioned, she declined to elaborate on the "Obstacles and Restrictions."

Mrs. Robert, who is in Washington for a meeting of the D. A. R. executive committee, declared when asked to comment on Mrs. Keyes' resignation: "I'm sorry, but I have nothing to say."

the very latest Republicans could meet and still organize an effective campaign. With this established, proponents of the month's postponement contended Republicans should proceed to pick that date which best suits them without contesting with Democrats for "last say." They predicted Democrats themselves would divide on any plan to longer delay their own meeting.

Chairman John Hamilton, of the Republican National Committee, in a statement cautioned that the executive committee "has no power to fix either the time or place for the convention, this being a prerogative of the full committee." Hamilton said nonetheless he will "consult with those at the meeting as to when the full committee should be called into session to select a time and place for the national convention."

Eight Arrive Early

Eight national committeemen and officers arrived in Washington early yesterday, first of a score slated to attend this morning's semiannual executive session. Several called on Hamilton at headquarters and conferred with party leaders at the Capitol.

Col. R. B. Creager, national committeeman from Texas, who called on Hamilton, was one of those espousing the one-month convention delay.

"Our Presidential campaigns have been too long," said Creager. "I think the President is right about that. My personal opinion is that we should put off our own convention a month. We needn't worry about what the Democrats do."

Harrison E. Spangler, National committeemen from Iowa, another headquarters caller, said he thought there should be no hurry in reaching a convention decision, but "there isn't going to be any jockeying by us for convention position."

"We will decide independently, without any thought of what the President said or of what Mr. Farley does," said Spangler. "After all, this is to be a convention of Republicans, not Democrats."

except to clean his own cell; no trips even into the special yard of his own cell block save collectively with other "protectives."

His categorization as a "protective" was announced by Warden Lawes in a single sentence:

"It will be done for his own welfare and that of the institution."

Other prison authorities pointed out that in Sing Sing there were Jews and Poles.

As he left New York this morning, handcuffed to a deputy sheriff and another prisoner, one of the last men to see him was his erstwhile employer, Henry Ford. The manufacturer, for whom Kuhn once worked as a chemist, was at Grand Central Station awaiting the arrival by freight of an automobile from Detroit. He walked along the platform and peered for a moment into the smoker in which Kuhn sat.

Kuhn's only valuables when he arrived here were $1 Canadian and £1/10 in English currency.

He asked whether he would be compelled to sign an order authorizing the warden to open his mail.

"It is not compulsory," an attendant explained, "but unless prisoners sign, their mail is not delivered to them." Kuhn signed.

Knickerbocker Predicts War For Generations

New York, Dec. 6.—The war in Europe will continue for six years at least and is but the preliminary for the "real war" which will end peace for generations to come, H. R. Knickerbocker, International News Service correspondent, declared today.

"There isn't a chance that Britain and France will ever stop this war until they have taken Germany apart like an alarm clock," Knickerbocker declared.

worse. I had to keep the children out of his way.

The pain, both mental and physical, that Mrs. X endured during those months can be explained only by her love for her husband. But even that could not forever blind her to the fact that her husband was mentally ill, and that she was endangering her own and her five children's lives by remaining with him.

She went to the family agency for help. She realizes the future support of the children will depend on her. It has not yet been possible to have the husband committed to a mental hospital, but this will be done.

Mrs. X is now too confused and upset to think clearly about what she might do. She worked before her marriage and is confident she can obtain employment if she can make some arrangements for the children during the day.

The assurance that there is money for food and rent for two months will give her a breathing period, with a possibility she will be able to work out a permanent solution. With $100, necessities will be provided for Mrs. X and her five children for the next two months.

Mother's Failing Eyesight Brings Family Crisis

Case No. 14

Mrs. T's long struggle to rear and educate her three girls had almost succeeded when misfortune came. Now, just before the girls are getting to the age when they could take care of her, the family is faced with need.

For more than 10 years, since she has been a widow, Mrs. T. has managed to support the girls by her sewing. But her vision has been failing after long strain and lack of money to provide proper attention.

Sometime her vision is so blurred she can barely see. She frequently has headaches. Until last summer, she was able to keep on at her work. Now she can go no further without help.

The oldest girl, Mary, who is 18, has graduated from high school and just a few weeks ago got a part-time job at $7 a week. The family of four cannot live on that. The second girl, Jane, will finish high school this year. She wants to stop school now because of the family difficulties, but her mother cannot bear to think of her dropping out. Besides, Jane should keep on with her typing and stenographic course so she will be prepared to get a job. The third daughter has two more years to go.

Examination by an eye specialist and new glasses will enable Mrs. T to remain self-supporting. With additional funds to keep the family from want while she is making a new start, their gloomy outlook for Christmas will be lightened. This can be accomplished with $125.

Family certified and help administered without cost by Salvation Army. Amount needed: $125.

These three families, among the 50 neediest, can be helped out of their distress by prompt and generous response from citizens who are ready to give when they know the need.

apparently had been attacked in his sleep and hit over the head with a heavy object. Dr. Martin said ferocity of the blows indicated a crime of vengeance. The weapon was not found.

District Attorney William F. X. Geoghan, of Kings County, asked police to broadcast an alarm for an unidentified man, described as of small build and wearing a mustache, who had lived with Engelberg.

The secretary's body was found shortly after noon by Fred Doell, another consulate employe, who was sent to Brooklyn by Dr. Hans Borchers, the consul general, to learn why Engelberg had not reported for work since Monday.

Dr. Martin said the secretary had been dead 24 hours.

Police said it was clear the motive had not been robbery for Engelberg's valuables were left undisturbed.

Investigators also checked on five or six male servants who had worked for the secretary, one at a time, after it was noted none lasted on the job more than two or three weeks. A locked phonograph with loop antennae was left sealed for future investigation.

Neighbors said a costly automobile and trailer with two-way radio equipment had been parked in a nearby lot last summer.

Baroness Tells Of Fight on Communism

Hypocritic Christians Responsible for Reds, College Students Told

Baroness Catherine de Hueck, who said she fled Russia after 40 members of her family died or were killed in the revolution, told yesterday how she is seeking to beat Communists at their own game, through Catholic social action work in the slums of Harlem and Toronto.

The baroness, a robust, energetic woman, who spoke to students of the Immaculate Junior College, declared that "Communists are not born, they are made by hypocritical Christians who render lip service alone to Christianity."

Member of former wealthy Russian family, Baroness de Hueck said she was trained as a nurse before the revolution. When she came to this country she started work for $8 a week in a laundry, and during the '20's rose to a $125 a week job as an assistant business manager. Later, she said, she turned to "spiritual adventure," returned to nursing training, and then went into the slums of Toronto, with her program of social action.

She described founding a Catholic settlement house there, and later setting up a similar organization in Harlem. As an example of Communist activity she told of learning how 80 colored families in a Louisiana bayou had been turned toward Communism by one white couple.

Even in the bayous, she said, "the Catholics should be there first, but you do not see them there."

Reorganization Proving Costly, Says Dirksen

2 Others of House Appropriations Group Concur in Belief

By the Associated Press

Two Republicans and a Democrat on the House Appropriations Committee said yesterday that President Roosevelt's reorganization of the Government was increasing, rather than decreasing, Federal expenditures.

They told newsmen that Budget Bureau estimates for the next fiscal year indicated that Government personnel would be increased considerably.

Representative Dirksen (Republican), Illinois, said that, not counting defense requirements, the Federal pay roll had been increased by 11,605 from May to December. He reported 40,056 persons were added because of the defense program.

"When the roll is called down yonder at the Treasury Department pay office, it seems to get bigger and bigger," Dirksen declared. "Two or three more reorganization plans and we'll soon have a million persons on the civil pay roll."

He said the Civil Service Commission listed 937,357 employes on December 1.

A high-ranking Democrat on the committee, who declined to be quoted by name, said the new Federal Security Agency had "a great many more" employes than the total of separate agencies from which it was formed.

The government reorganization act under which President Roosevelt made two major reshuffings of agencies, prohibits abolition of any existing Federal function.

Representative Taber, of New York, senior Republican committeeman, said indications were that the program would result in "less efficiency and more cost" than previously.

Although some officials said when the law was proposed that increased efficiency rather than economy was the primary purpose of the reorganization, President Roosevelt estimated savings to the Government would amount to at least $16,000 000 annually.

Inter-American Group Studies Ocean Rates

By the Associated Press

The inter-American economic committee weighed yesterday a proposal that it seek a conference between representatives of shipping companies and Government maritime experts of the nations of this hemisphere with a view to maintaining "reasonable" ocean freight rates.

The proposal, included in a report submitted by the commerce subcommittee, was discussed at yesterday's plenary session, and it was agreed to resume consideration of the matter at the next meeting Saturday.

Ricardo Castro Beeche, Minister of Costa Rica, and Hugo Goutheir, of the Brazilian Embassy staff, drafted the sub-committee's report. It expressed belief that "as the maritime routes among the American republics are not within the belligerent zone, the imposition of exaggeratedly high freight rates, disproportionate to the risks, are not justified."

Ship Transfers Seen

The subcommittee said there was a possibility of transferring United States ships, tied up because of the neutrality law, to the Atlantic and Pacific routes of this hemisphere.

The subcommittee also recommended study of the following questions:

Creation of a permanent exposition of the products of the American nations in various cities, particularly New York.

A campaign, particularly in the United States, to increase purchases in the American republics of products formerly bought in other countries.

A recommendation to all American governments to initiate as soon as possible the study of commercial agreements based on the most-favored-nation clause.

A recommendation to all American governments for a study of possible reductions in tariffs and other commercial barriers.

A recommendation for investigation of industrial application of agricultural by-products.

Mineral Study Proposed

A recommendation to all American governments for study of financial aid to industries whose production can replace articles imported from non-American countries.

A recommendation to all American governments for study of development and exploitation of mineral resources.

A request to the Pan-American Union for information on what has been accomplished in establishing a uniform custom nomenclature in all American republics.

Study of a practical advertising and propaganda campaign to increase consumption, especially in the United States, of agricultural and mineral products not produced in this country.

Takoma Park Gets New Subdivision

A new subdivision for the construction of 40 homes was approved yesterday by Mayor John R. Adams and the council of Takoma Park, Md. The developers of the tract on part of the Fletcher land off Jackson avenue near Garland avenue are Philip and Sadie Milestone.

Work on 20 dwellings will begin immediately. The houses will be in the $5,000 to $6,000 class.

FCC Boosts Rate U. S. Pays for Telegrams

After January 1, Uncle Sam will have to pay more for his telegrams, according to a decision given yesterday by one of his own agencies.

The Federal Communications Commission ruled that Government rate on official domestic telegraph messages will be increased from the present 40 per cent of charges applicable to commercial communications to 60 per cent. The new rate will continue until June 30.

WPA Plans Survey of Trade Barriers in 9 Eastern States

Study Is First Initiated by Hopkins' Interdepartmental Committee to Guide Formulation of Corrective Measures

WPA Commissioner Harrington said yesterday his agency will undertake a study of trade barriers in nine Eastern States "for the benefit of businessmen engaged in interstate commerce."

The study, "for the guidance of the State and Federal governments in devising corrective measures," is the first initiated by the interdepartmental committee on trade barrier legislation created by Secretary of Commerce Hopkins. The inquiry will present a digest of individual statutes which act as trade barriers, according to Harrington.

States to be covered by the study are Massachusetts New York, New Jersey, Rhode Island, South Carolina, Virginia, Mississippi, Kentucky and Louisiana.

The committee held its first meeting yesterday. It discussed a three-way approach to presenting testimony in hearings to be sought before the Temporary National Economic Committee on elimination of such barriers.

To make more effective cooperative efforts with State and other organizations already working on this problem, the committee announced it was inviting the following to serve as an advisory group:

Frank Bane, executive director of the council of State governments; Dr. W. Y. Elliott, school of government, Harvard University; Prof. F. Eugene Melder of the department of economics, Clarke University; Willard L. Thorp, economic advisor to Hopkins, and Richard V. Gilbert, chief of the division of industrial economics of the Department of Commerce.

The interdepartmental committee, of which Paul T. Truitt of the Commerce Department is chairman, includes Honore Catudal, of the State Department; A. Ford Heinrichs representing Dr. Isador Lubin, of the Department of Labor; Dr. Frederick V. Waugh, of the Department of Agriculture; George Comer, representing Dr. Corwin D. Edwards, of the Department of Justice; A. H. Martin, jr., of the Federal Works Agency; Don Montgomery, consumers counsel, Agriculture Department, and Dr. John H. Cover, of the national resources committee.

Deficit for 5 Months Is $1,753,289,601

The Treasury disclosed yesterday that it had spent more than $4,000,000,000 in five months and a few odd days.

Making public Treasury figures for December 4, the Treasury said that since the fiscal year began on July 1, expenditures amounted to $4,006,334,782, and revenues $2,253,045,181.

This made a deficit of $1,753,289,601, and established the prospect that it would be doubled before the end of the fiscal year. On the corresponding date last year, the Treasury deficit was $1,508,619,020, expenditures having been somewhat smaller and revenues slightly larger than in the corresponding period this year.

War Nears Swedish Border

Russian troops were reported a fifth of the way across northern Finland yesterday from Kandalaksha (1), reaching Kuolajarvi (2)—only 150 miles from Swedish border—presumably heading for Rovanieni (3). Here the Arctic highway connects with a rail line running to the port of Kemi (4). Just beyond Kuolajarvi lie the rich Swedish iron mines (5). Two Finnish refugee boats were reported sunk near Varengerfjord (6). Finns were reported to have sent air-raiders over Baltiski (7)

On a Neighbor's Independence Day

SWEDEN feared for her neutrality as Soviet troops yesterday fought their way to within 150 miles of her border, pounding through Finnish troops on the twenty-second anniversary of Finland's independence.

AS a result of Russia's invasion of Finland, Sweden is pushing defensive preparations on an exhaustive scale. The pictures on this page indicate the high state of preparedness of the Swedish navy. Renowned for prowess on the seas, Sweden's young naval students are given an intensive course of study at the Stockholm Naval School.

SWEDEN depends upon this new generation of sailors to protect her shores that are lapped today by the war-troubled waters of the North and Baltic seas.

Haiti's Chief Executive Here To Seek Loan

Has Irrigation Project; Will See Roosevelt; Lauds 'Neighbor' Policy

President Stenio Vincent of Haiti arrived yesterday to discuss financial aid from the United States Government in solving economic difficulties confronting the island republic as a result of the war.

He declared Haiti would be glad to join in a Pan-American declaration condemning Russia's invasion of Finland.

He said he hoped to obtain new credits from the Export-Import Bank to construct an irrigation and drainage project. The bank last year extended to Haiti a credit of $5,000,000 to build a system of "farm-to-market" roads on condition that equipment and materials be procured in this country.

The problem of finding a market for Haiti's coffee, in view of the European blockade, also will be taken up, he said. Other matters to be discussed, he explained, include a general program for developing Haitian enterprises and strengthening econmic ties between his country and the United States.

The Haitian president was greeted at Union Station by Acting Secretary of State Welles, military and naval aides of President Roosevelt, other State Department officials, and representatives of the Pan-American Union. He had been accompanied from Port-au-Prince by Ferdinand L. Mayer, American Minister to Haiti.

Vincent said his presence in this country "is particularly significant." When he came in 1934, he recalled, it was to obtain removal of the Marines from Haiti.

Vincent will have lunch with President Roosevelt Monday.

Vincent said he had devoted himself "body and soul" to Secretary of State Hull's "good neighbor" policy, despite "numerous warnings given by those self-interested people who look upon Pan-American solidarity as being harmful to their own private advantage."

Colmar Manor May Have to Levy 'Perforation' Tax

Colmar Manor, Md., residents may have to pay a "perforation" tax against their will.

Under a recent act of the State Legislature, applications sent to Baltimore for automobile tags must be perforated by municipal and county officials. The perforations show that municipal and county levies have been paid.

Although Colmar Manor doesn't have a tax on automobiles, town officials are wondering if they will have to perforate applications for tags.

If the law requires this, town officials said they probably would have to levy a special tax to cover the cost of perforating the cards.

Jennings, Kea To Give Report on Housing Needs

"Slum" conditions in Prince Georges County that portray the need for better housing will be described to the board of county commissioners Tuesday at Upper Marlboro.

Col. William T. Jennings, Hyattsville town councilman, and Paul Kea, president of the Prince Georges Chamber of Commerce, will report on a survey they made to determine the feasibility of a program similar to Montgomery County's housing project.

Col. Jennings said yesterday that so far they had found more than 700 "substandard homes" in the county. He estimated this figure was only about 25 per cent of the total. Eighteen communities were visited, Col. Jnennings said.

Postlude

By Ray C. B. Brown.

Dr. Walter Bauer conducts the Department of Agriculture Orchestra and Symphonic Choir Wednesday night in the Department Auditorium.

As on all occasions when the Department of Agriculture Orchestra presents a concert, a capacity audience assembled last evening to give friendly approbation and encouragement to the amateur organization. The program differed markedly from the usual procedure in that the Symphonic Choir had a major share and the orchestra contented itself with three numbers and served the rest of the time as accompanist.

One can always count on Dr. Walter Bauer for a novelty or two, and he did not disappoint expectations. The most meritorious of his selections was Johan Severin Svendsen's "Legend of Princess Zorahayde," a delightful tone-poem characterized by refinement of instrumentation and melodic beauty. Dr. Bauer has an obvious liking for this Norwegian composer, for he has in the last few seasons played two of his rhapsodies and one of his symphonies. The other purely orchestral pieces were Dvorak's Slavonic Dance in G minor and the Dream Pantomime from Humperdinck's "Haensel und Gretel."

The women's section of the Symphonic Choir was heard in Brahms' "I Hear a Harp," with accompaniment of horn and harp; Woodman's "Dreams In Twilight" and Edgar Stillman Kelley's humorous "Lady Picking Mulberries" with its clever use of Chinese idiom. Kelley lived for two years in San Francisco as an organist and music critic, and was fascinated by the Chinese theater, where he acquired knowledge of Oriental modes later utilized in this song and his "Aladdin" suite.

The men's section of the chorus paid a tribute to Mary Howe, resident composer, by singing her effectively scored "Chain Gang Song" after they had presented Schubert's "Die Allmacht." In the second half of the program the entire chorus was heard in "The Spell of the Forest," from Rimski-Korsakov's opera, "Pskovitianka;" a "Polovtsi Dance," from Borodin's "Knaz Igor;" the "Gloria," from Henry Farmer's Mass in B flat, "A Tone," by Peter Cornelius, and "Come and Sing," from the Johann Strauss operetta, "The Bat."

David Manley sang the tenor solos in the Schubert and Strauss numbers, and the vocal quartet, in the "Gloria," was composed of Elaine Abbott, Carol Reents, John Britt and James Wesner.

Object All Sublime

Major Brown had, of course, no alternative in the case of Mr. Kilsoo K. Haan, of the Sino-Korean People's League, who wanted permission to picket the Japanese Embassy with "signs, flags, drums, firecrackers and horns." Picketing, with or without noise, within 500 feet of any embassy or legation, is now happily prohibited by statute; so that was that.

But even had Major Brown been able to grant the permit and had seen fit to do so, it seems unlikely that our Sino-Korean friends would have accomplished anything much. Their purpose, as far as we can make out, was to inflict a certain quantity of auricular discomfort upon the embassy staff to avenge all the assorted discomforts the Japanese government is alleged to have inflicted on the Koreans and the Chinese.

In almost any other capital such a gesture of vengeance might seem both ingenious and charmingly Oriental—all the more so, perhaps, because it would reflect those principles of poetic justice that the late W. S. Gilbert put into the mouth of a well-known Japanese penologist. But here in Washington it is quite improbable that any mere whanging of drums and sputtering of firecrackers would be distinguishable above the normal, everyday orchestration of motor horns, ambulance sirens, pneumatic drills and back-firing trucks.

Indeed, unless Mr. Kilsoo Haan and his friends could also have persuaded Major Brown to let them augment their horns, drums and firecrackers with a battery of twelve-inch guns and a chorus of carnival barkers, the chances are that Mr. Horinouchi and his staff would not know they had been picketed until they read about it in the newspapers.

With More Than Words

However much Americans may differ on certain aspects of President Roosevelt's foreign policy, they are likely to approve overwhelmingly his plan to demonstrate by more than words alone this Nation's deepest sympathy for Finland.

The President has declared that when Congress meets in January he will recommend that the debt payment due from that war-torn republic on December 15 be segregated for the benefit of the Finnish people. And the President's conferences yesterday with Federal Loan Administrator Jesse Jones and with Chairman Norman H. Davis of the American Red Cross suggest that support for the Finnish cause will take other concrete forms.

Russia's wanton and unprovoked attack on her little neighbor has aroused American public opinion as did no other act of aggression of recent years. Many of those who were most vehement in denunciation of the plan to employ "measures short of war" against aggressors are now clamoring for just such measures against the Soviet.

During these years of developing international anarchy the United States has not been behindhand in denouncing acts of aggression. This Nation has steadfastly refused to recognize Manchukuo, the Italian conquest of Ethiopia, the German annexation of Czecho-Slovakia, the Russo-German partition of Poland.

In the case of Finland the Administration plans to go farther, and in doing so it is sure to have the approval of the American people. The vast disparity in size, population, resources and war strength between Russia and Finland has made it clear that expressions of sympathy are not enough. And past history has shown that treaty-breaking states are not likely to be deterred by verbal denunciations alone.

This fact was long ago recognized at Geneva. Some years have elapsed since the League drew up a convention suggesting that all its members should provide financial aid for the victims of aggression. Little, if anything, came of that convention. But the principle it embodied remains as sound today as it was at the time it was written.

It is curious that, in the case of Finland, the United States may take the lead in carrying such a principle into effect. The extent of the aid we render the hard-pressed Scandinavian democracy may not be great. It will certainly not be great if it is limited merely to remission of the impending debt payment. Yet even that would be more useful at the present juncture of affairs than words of praise for the brave stand taken by Finland in opposing single-handed its powerful and utterly unscrupulous foe.

Radicals And Reds

Not the least important by-product of the Russian invasion of Finland has been the complete disintegration in this country of the so-called "popular front." A deep and probably permanent split has developed between Russian Communism on the one hand and native American radicalism on the other.

The cleavage appeared as soon as the Russo-German pact was signed last August. Obedient to the orders of Moscow, the American Communist Party then immediately changed its line. Prior to the alliance between Stalin and Hitler our domestic Communists had shouted vociferously for every sort of offensive against the Nazis. When the Berlin and Moscow dictatorships decided to affiliate, the Reds promptly changed their line to a continuous high-pitched denunciation of Anglo-French "imperialism." Those who were essentially old-fashioned radicals, and who therefore possessed intellectual honesty, could not make the rapid backward somersaults ordered by Stalin.

But as long as the Communists could assert with some justification that they were "anti-war," some vestiges of a "popular front" remained. While sacrificing radical anti-Nazi support the devotees of Moscow were able to appeal to some of strongly pacifist inclinations. Although Stalin's pose as a valiant anti-Fascist had woefully collapsed, the substitute role of Stalin the peacemaker was still impressive to gullible minds.

With the launching of a blatant war of extermination against Finland, and the murderous bombings of its civilian population by Soviet planes, the mask was finally stripped from Communist duplicity. And with the revelation of the Moscow gangsters for what they are scores and hundreds of American radicals have repudiated the party and all its works. By none is this more clearly recognized than the Communists themselves.

In his column in that most refreshing Communist paper, the Daily Worker, yesterday, a Mr. Mike Gold grew somewhat bitter about the horror with which most American radicals now regard their erstwhile "comrades."

"Some of our best liberals," wrote Mr. Gold, "people who have for decades bored one with their self-complacent attitudes of nobility and fair play, seem to be howling their cultivated heads off as crudely as the worst Kluxers." He seems particularly annoyed with that earnest liberal publication which he describes as the "mealy-mouthed, weather-cock Nation" and he concludes that "in a crisis, you can nearly always bank on the fact that they (the liberals) will let you (the Communists) down."

Now all this mayhem and verbal butchery in the ranks of the erstwhile "popular front" is not as trivial as it appears. Comrade Gold, while off-standard in a lot of his writing, is voicing a profound truth when he sorrowfully admits that the authentic American radical has a mind which cannot be controlled from Moscow. He does well to remind those who represent Russia in this country that in a real crisis they cannot hope to hoodwink many of their erstwhile "fellow travelers."

There is at this time a certain disposition to cover with a single blanket all who are in any way rebellious, dissatisfied or sharply critical of social injustices. Such an attitude, feeding on the perfidy of the Soviet government, might very easily be extended without discrimination to many whose patriotism is as real, whose honor is as high, as that of Stalin's American agents is suspect or degraded. Should that development, directed against real American radicalism, occur, it would be ominous for this democracy.

The words of Mr. Gold are worth remembering. The real American radical, sometimes irritating but always honorable, is no stooge for the Communists. He will always let the latter down; he will always demand that fair play which the Reds so deeply resent, when the issue is one of fundamental importance to American ideals and institutions.

Gum Droppers

Mayor LaGuardia's latest ambition is nothing less than to improve the condition of the sidewalks and subway platforms of New York so that the most fastidious angel need not fear to tread them. To accomplish this audacious reform he has set out to modify the habits of the gum-chewing inhabitants of his five boroughs.

Chicle or chewing gum, like tobacco, is one of America's distinctive contributions to modern civilization. Mr. LaGuardia is neither so reckless nor so impious as to seek to abolish a custom which gives employment to so many tens of millions of jaws. All that he asks of the votaries is that they find something better to do with the worn-out gum than to drop it on the pavement or to put it on the seats of subway cars.

To remove gum from such places costs the City of New York "literally hundreds of thousands of dollars a year," the mayor complained in a letter to the gum manufacturers. He is seeking their cooperation in a "campaign of education." Considering what enormous quantities of gum are removed free of all expense to the city on the shoes and clothing of citizens, the figure quoted by the mayor seems a bit staggering. A great deal of "education" no doubt will be needed.

One obvious difficulty Mr. LaGuardia is likely to encounter is that of discovering any suitable repository for second-hand gum. A movement to revive the old custom of storing used gum behind the ear would doubtless encounter vigorous opposition from hairdressers or barbers. Besides it might appreciably diminish the sales of fresh gum, and in this the chicle companies could not be expected to cooperate very heartily.

We don't want to seem discouraging, but we think it only fair to remind Mr. LaGuardia that human ingenuity has yet to find any real solution to the problem of what to do with old safety razor blades.

A Strong Defense

Secretary Hull's defense of the trade treaties before the American Farm Bureau Federation was an unusually cogent exposition of the importance of stimulating a healthy flow of trade betwen nations. He was perhaps disposed to isolate the paralyzing effect of the Hawley-Smoot tariff upon our foreign trade, disregarding the disrupting effect of reparations and inter-governmental debts upon normal peace-time commerce during the twenties. With that exception, however, his presentation leaves little to criticize.

Assertions that the farmer has been seriously injured by increased competition from imported agricultural products under the trade agreements program are effectively refuted by Mr. Hull's analysis of the character of those imports. Thus, he showed that about two-thirds of our agricultural imports during the current year consisted of commodities not grown in the United States, and part of the remaining third were products not raised in amounts sufficient to meet domestic requirements.

Moreover, the facts relating to farm prices and farm income do not indicate that the lowering of tariff under the reciprocal trade agreements has injured the farm population. Adroitly Mr. Hull points out that the collapse of prices between 1929 and 1932 occurred while the Hawley-Smoot tariff was in force. On the other hand, the boost which the trade agreements have given to exports of American manufactured goods has benefited farmers as well as workers and manufacturers.

The task of exposing misstatements about the workings of the trade pacts is, however, relatively easy compared with that of enlisting positive support for the program. Not only is it necessary to persuade the farmer that a few concessions on imported products will not ruin him, but he has to be convinced that concessions are positively beneficial. In undertaking this difficult task Mr. Hull wisely does not claim too much for his program. He realizes that war in Europe will raise up new obstacles of attainment of the greater freedom of interchange at which he aims. But, as he says, that "does not in any sense change the fundamentals."

It is not the fault of the Secretary of State that the Administration has pursued a price-raising policy for agriculture that has drastically curtailed our export outlets in times of peace. For some of our export crops, the war, indeed, will be a temporary boon. It has already resulted in a decision by the Department of Agriculture to halve the export subsidy on cotton.

Of course Mr. Hull could not be expected to note the obstacles to attainment of his aims that are an outgrowth of Administration policies. But in reminding his hearers that foreign countries have retaliated in the past for drastic increases in our tariff barriers, he might have hinted that they will be equally quick to protect themselves against this Government's export subsidies.

Santiago Iglesias

When terrorists belonging to the Puerto Rican Nationalist Party fired at Santiago Iglesias, while he was making a speech at San Juan three years ago, they were unwittingly paying him high tribute. The shots aimed in his direction were proof that the extremists regarded Iglesias as a dangerous foe whose activities tended to take the wind out of their sails.

A native of Spain, Iglesias was intimately identified with Puerto Rican affairs for more than 40 years, first, as a labor leader, later as founder of the Puerto Rican Socialist Party, and from 1933 until his death this week as the island's resident commissioner in Washington.

Devoted to the interests of the people of his adopted home, Iglesias steadfastly held to the belief that their welfare depended on an increasing integration of Puerto Rico with the American commonwealth. He felt that were the island to embark on an independent course, only impoverishment and ruin could result. In this he demonstrated the wisdom and forethought which characterized all his activities for his fellow-man.

Government Employes

To the Editor of The Post—Sir: While Comptroller General Brown is right with reference to Government employes who spend too much time on their toilettes, he failed to mention the ones who smoke from the moment they enter the office until they leave—this habit is condoned and encouraged by those in charge. Some of these people seldom are seen without a cigar, a pipe or a cigarette—they burn holes in the files and set the wastebaskets on fire.

In addition to this loss of time, they are to be seen at all hours in the lunchroom, and as if this were not enough, they are eating while sitting at their desks. On paydays, as soon as these people receive their checks, they start running to the bank.

It would be to the interest of the taxpayers to mail the pay to certain employes without letting them ever come to the office. A checkup concerning so-called overtime which many persons are supposed to do, as well as talking over the telephone, might be in order. These are they who all too often are given excellent ratings and salaries far in excess of their worth.

A very definite way of determining an employe's efficiency (this applies both to the quality and the quantity of his work) is to send his work to a capable, disinterested person outside the Government. It is only fair to the public to see that people are paid salaries commensurate with their ability.

As a final test, it might be well to give the same work first to those in the higher-salaried brackets and later to the ones whose pay ranges from $1,260 to $1,440 and see whether certain employes who are underpaid would deign to tackle some of these positions for less than $6,500 to $12,000.

The outcome of this kind of examination would no doubt be both interesting and enlightening. And someone might investigate the duties of couples whose salaries, according to the newspapers, total $14,500.

'Buses Were Conforming'

To the Editor of The Post—Sir: Howard Wentworth's Traffic Series was most interesting, and, I believe, constructive in most cases. However, in one instance a statement and accompanying photograph are very misleading.

The author takes to task the Capital Transit Co. for an instance in which The Post photographer caught a picture of two Transit buses abreast on Thirteenth street. According to Mr. Wentworth, the picture indicated that one bus was attempting to pass another going in the same direction, thereby creating an unnecessary traffic obstruction.

As a matter of fact, had these particular buses not been abreast, traffice would have been really demoralized for the moment. You see, the L4 bus was about to make a left turn eastbound into E street, while the J6 was, as it should have been, in the proper lane to continue on Thirteenth street. So, in this case, the buses were conforming to the best traffic regulations, in spite of the published implication.

Our Relations With Russia

To the Editor of The Post—Sir: It is with wonder and shame that we are constrained to admit that nations, even the best, are strangely pusillanimous as compared with even the run-of-the-mine ordinary individual, who makes no pretense at all of being particularly courageous or honorable.

For example, take our own country at this moment in history. We like to feel proud of our country, to believe that it is a brave and chivalrous Nation. But if nations were individuals, like any dozen or more men you might pick at random from the body politic, we would have the shameful spectacle of the brawniest and most self-righteous of them standing by with their thumbs in their armholes, while their two closest friends were in a life and death struggle with a dangerous maniac; while another cherished friend, far less able to defend himself than the others, was being attacked by a sadistic ruffian, with no chance of escape from a fate too terrible to contemplate. That would be our own Uncle Sam—if nations were individuals, but continued to act like nations.

In the face of barbarism unexampled since the days of Genghis Khan we pass a bill making it a prison offense for any American boy to volunteer to fight for Finland!

In spite of our collective timidity, however, it is hard to believe that the traditional American spirit is altogether dead among Americans as individuals.

Suppose the Secretary of State were to call in the Ambassador from the U. S. S. R. tomorrow, and say to him:

"Here's your passport. Take it and get out. Our Government can no longer maintain the pretense of friendship with a government of liars and conspirators, who wage war by bombing innocent women and children."

May we not trust that such a gesture would bring a warm resurgence of the old spirit that animated our body politic when we were a relatively weak Nation, but a brave one—like Finland? At any rate something like that would go far toward neutralizing the bitter shame that has troubled so many Americans ever since our Government extended the hand of fellowship to Stalin and his gang in 1933.

CYMRO.

Bladensburg, Md., Dec. 5.

To the Editor of The Post—Sir: Widespread demands that the United States break off diplomatic relation with Russia are a natural reaction to as flagrant an act of aggression as history can show. They are, however, based upon emotion. And it is not wise for the United States in these days to steer by emotion when the other great powers are steering by national interest.

A rupture of diplomatic relations, or even a withdrawal of our Ambassador, would create a situation liable to last for years when the world balance is changing every day. It might affect this balance adversely for us on both our oceanic fronts, since it would work directly to push Russia closer to Germany and Japan. By pushing Moscow closer to Berlin, it would tend to spread the present European war. Yet it would not help Finland, and would only serve our own outraged feelings.

There are other ways of showing our abhorrence of Russia's course which would not create this situation since they need not be extended far into an uncertain future. We might, for example, join or support a general condemnation of Russia by the American republics or the League of Nations, or act more concretely by restricting her commerce with us or placing her Arctic ports within a combat zone.

LIVINGSTON HARTLEY.

Washington, Dec. 5.

To the Editor of The Post—Sir: Recalling an ambassador, except as an immediate preliminary to war, is the diplomacy of little girls who "do not speak."

Should we break diplomatic relations with Russia, we would speak to her thereafter, no doubt, through the British Ambassador in Moscow, and Russia would talk to us by the German Embassy here.

Until we have decided for ourselves to make war, let us not recall our American representatives.

THOMAS McMORROW.

Some Letter About Peace

To the Editor of The Post—Sir: Every day the war continues, every day it seems to spread, and so long as it does rage there is always the danger that sooner or later we will be sending our sons to the trenches. I lived through the last war. My husband was in it. I remember the bitterness and disillusionment and shock of those young men when they came back from France.

I remember all the years since, wherever we turned we saw a steady stream of explanation of how that war came about and what caused it. I remember Senator Nye's long fight and his years of teachings about profits and munitions and war boom. I remember that much of the devastation of the depression was explained as a result, long delayed, of debits and destruction of goods arising out of the war.

Now today my grown-up son is being threatened, too. Like his daddy, he is being told he must make the world safe for democracy. His daddy did not succeed in making it safe. It is all too terrible. I do not want to see the look in my child's face that I saw in the faces that came home not so long ago. I beg of you in your column of "letters" never miss a day without some letter about peace. I want to know how many other mothers feel as I do. There are millions of us.

I read your letters every day. I read those of peace with hope and fear in my heart. A gold star is cold comfort for the son we have loved and reared and have such high hopes for. Let us mothers speak to everyone we can; tell them that nothing but horror and suffering are in store for us if we do not watch every tiny step that leads down the dreadful path to war.

Donations By Pressure

To the Editor of The Post—Sir: The President recently delivered an address when he laid the cornerstone of the library on his estate, in which he said that the building when completed would be turned over to the Government free and clear of any cost to the taxpayers.

I should like to ask if it would not be in order for the newspapers to make inquiry as to just how the money is being raised to pay the cost of constructing this building.

I am an attorney in one of the independent agencies of the Government. Recently I was called in, shown a list of the higher paid employes of the agency with which I am connected, and told that I was expected to contribute $50 in the form of a donation for the President's library. I asked some questions, but I was told that if I did not contribute my name would go back to the chairman who, it was said, was very much interested in raising the money, with the notation that I had declined to go along with the rest of the boys.

Now, I do not know whether the President is aware of the tactics that are being used to raise the money for this undertaking, but if he is, I am very much disillusioned as to his ideals in fostering this project. I need every dollar that I can get my hands on, particularly at this season of the year, yet I felt that it was contribute or incur the displeasure of the powers that be, so I signed up. I know of others who were put in the same position as myself. FEDERAL WORKER.

Correction

In the letter from Mr. Mauritz Hallgren in The Post yesterday, a typographical error made his last sentence read: "Yet our protest against this (Russian) aggression must be registered so clearly and effectively that Britain and Moscow cannot possibly misunderstand our attitude." This should have been "Berlin and Moscow."

Night Out

Now, as it happened, the Young Man didn't really care anything about having one night out a week. But, after having been married for two years, it suddenly occurred to him that he should be making noises like a husband. Everywhere he went, he heard men using such phrases as "laying the law down," "showing who's master," "putting your foot down" and "maintaining an upper hand."

During the first year of marriage the very thought of making plans, independent of the Little Woman, would have been heresy. Occasionally he did make brief ventures to the bowling alley on his own. But that was just around the corner and didn't count. In order to become one of the truly initiate and enter Man's Estate, it is necessary to set aside one night every week and stick to it, come fire, come flood, come wifely objections.

In fact, the whole business must needs become a sort of ritual. Step No. 1 in the ritual is to go back to the favorite bar of one's bachelordom, be hailed by the barkeep and the brethren as a prodigal son-of-a-gun returning to his old haunts, and then bottoms up. After a few cockle-warming drinks, step No. 2 is the all-important decision about dinner. Somebody always knows where the perfect steak may be had. "No fancy fixin's, you understand, just a T-bone fit for the gods, maybe a few French fries, and black coffee." It all sounds very plain and very masculine. No mayonnaise doodads, no coy patty shells, no anticlimax in the form of demi-tasse.

After dinner, step No. 3 is to light up a big, black stogie and puff like mad, letting the ashes fall where they may. Then somebody tells a story and naturally somebody else has to top it and so on. Around 10 o'clock each man pushes back his chair, leaves a much bigger tip than he can afford, and steps out into the street, feeling very much the monarch of all he surveys. From then on, things aren't so cut-and-dried.

A man may go to his club, take in a burlesque, go up to one of the fellows' rooms and play poker, or just sit quietly in a tin-panny joint and guzzle beer. It's all very simple and very wonderful and very little to ask of the Better Half. So it came to pass that one night the Young Man put his foot down, his hat on, and ventured forth.

The place was just as he had remembered it, though perhaps a little dirtier, a little dingier, and a little darker than he recalled. The bar was where it had always been and over it was the same old moose head, one eye gone, but otherwise in fine fettle. At first, Joe didn't recognize him. "Well, yuh can't blame me, can yuh," he said later. "Ain't you put on a lotta weight?" Joe wasn't as good natured as he used to be. He was more business-like; less given to small talk. The Young Man looked around for better company.

"Well, if it's not the old man of the sea himself." They gathered around him and he sat down and ordered another drink.

"How's tricks?" Everybody asked him that at once. He hardly knew what to say. He wanted to tell them about the new house he had just bought and how there was a swell place for a tennis court off to one side and what a fine thing it was to have a thermostatic jigger on the furnace. But these were his old drinking pals, the guys he'd swapped telephone numbers with, the devil-may-care crowd he'd deserted to get married. So he told them a new story he'd just heard. There were a few appreciative guffaws and then silence. Somebody suggested dinner—"no fancy fixin's, you understand."

The Young Man looked down at the steak on his plate and wondered why he hadn't ordered something to go with it besides a few greasy french fries. The coffee was bitter as gall and sloshed all over the saucer. He couldn't very well order a dessert—nobody else did.

ooo

The club was all lit up like a Chinese New Year. Balloons were tied to the lighting fixtures and somewhere a band played with a strange beat. Pretty girls in evening dresses floated by on the arms of young beaux in dinner jackets.

"What's the big idea?" the Young Man demanded of the head bellhop. "Can't a man come to his club any more for a little peace and poker without running into a pack of hep cats?"

"Sorry, sir," the bellhop said, "But so many of our members married and dropped out or just pay their dues and don't come around any more that we had do something to keep the dining room open."

The Young Man felt rebuked but not at all guilty. Why, naturally, he didn't come around any more. He had his own home now and certain obligations to fulfill. But just the same, it was a shock to find that the club hadn't been standing there all these two years, awaiting his pleasure.

He felt a little dizzy. No wonder—all those drinks and scarcely any dinner at all. Just a steak—no salad, no green vegetable, no hot biscuits, no dessert. He sat down in a far corner of the barroom and ordered dinner served to him there. After the meal he felt better, though he hated eating by himself and always had. He wandered upstairs.

He stifled a yawn. It was only 1 o'clock but the room was stuffy with smoke. He surveyed the dwindling pile of chips in front of him, passed, and shut his eyes for a moment.

"Wake up, old man, the game's over." Somebody was shaking him vigorously. He felt like a fool. The clock pointed to half past three. He had been asleep over two hours.

It was wonderful to slip beneath the Blankets and really relax. The evening had been a complete fizzle. The dinner wasn't nearly as good as he would have gotten at home; the boys hadn't appreciated his jokes half as much as the Little Woman; the club wasn't what it used to be, and poker was as dull as dish water. All in all, his night out had been a complete flop.

At least, this is the story he told me, his wife . . .

Youth Movement

THERE IS an impression that Mrs. Roosevelt showed up the Dies committee by her conduct and her writings sympathetic to members of the American Youth Congress in Washington last week. That she tried to show up the Dies committee can be conceded without a struggle, but that she succeeded in doing so I don't agree. It is my belief that the committee showed up Mrs. Roosevelt instead, or, more correctly, that the committee created a situation in which she tipped her own hand. The question whether she is sympathetic with the Communists is a clumsy one and is not capable of absolute proof either way. Each person finds himself in the position of a juryman on that one, invited to reach his own verdict on the evidence, and, in any case, the evidence is convincing.

I think this whole Administration has been sympathetic with the Communists, and that Mrs. Roosevelt, holding neither appointment nor elective position, is influential in the opinions and policies of the Administration. That is all right, too. Mrs. Roosevelt is her own woman and this is their own Administration.

Matthews Called A Backslid Bolo

MY MOST convincing authority on the history and character of the Youth Congress is J. B. Matthews, the backslid Bolo, who was a fellow traveler for years and who is now an examiner and research man for the Dies committee.

I wouldn't trust Matthews as far as I could sling an anvil by the horn, because any man who admits, as he does, that he saw the Ukraine famine with his own eyes but refused to believe what he saw, and admits that long afterward he denounced as false, without even reading them, a series of articles by another witness, describing those horrors, is a liar by the clock, even though he calls his lies self-deception, as Matthews does.

But the sequence, the substance and the citations in Matthews' account of the history of the Youth Congress are such as to relieve me of any need for trusting his word. Matthews gives convincing evidence that the Communists did take over the Youth Congress, and, referring back to last summer, when this Trojan horse bucked, whinnied and squealed in wild alarm over a resolution to denounce communism along with fascism and compromised by denouncing dictatorships instead, I am confident of my conviction. The Bolos don't admit that the Stalin dictatorship is a dictatorship, so, technically, the Red punks did not repudiate Stalin in permitting that resolution to pass under great pressure.

Her Perturbation Comes Very Late

MRS. ROOSEVELT'S perturbation about the injustice that is inflicted on witnesses appearing before Congressional committees comes very late and not much better late than if it never had been expressed at all. It is a fact that citizens hailed before the inquisitors are not allowed counsel and that some examiners give them the old district attorney's treatment, but surely that isn't news to Mrs. Roosevelt after all this time, and it would have seemed better if she had taken occasion to object to such conduct toward simple citizens much earlier in the game.

Her protest, raised only now and in these particular circumstances, suggests that it wasn't so much the treatment itself as the identity and character of the victims that aroused the gracious lady's sense of justice.

She couldn't have thought of rushing to the defense of J. P. Morgan or of Mr. Hearst's telegrams, could she? True, it may be that these are bad Americans, but the civil liberties fans and Bolos themselves are always urging, on behalf of saboteurs and provocateurs, that the worst cases make the best cement to repair the structure of American rights.

Stalin No Worse Now Than Before

THIS YOUTH outfit may not now be as communistic as it was, but Mrs. Roosevelt was for it before the fall of Warsaw and the attack on Finland when it was at its worst. Communism hasn't changed at all in the meanwhile.

The Stalin dictatorship is no worse now than it was then and in these new atrocities is just running true to form and to the character ascribed to it all along by those who examined communism and nazism and found them alike. The fact that some American Bolos have quit communism since the Stalin-Hitler Pact means only that they were embarrassed and double-crossed by Stalin.

Anyway, this youth movement, like all the others, is a phony, because not one of them is a genuine youth movement. They are all organized, directed and hopped up by leaders of middle years who want to direct youth into some service, political, military or religious. The punks just think they are running their own shows. If not, then what is Mrs. Roosevelt doing in a youth movement?

Allies to Discuss Aims at Forum

Representatives of Great Britain, France and Poland will present war aims of the Allies tonight at the student council forum of George Washington University, it was announced yesterday. The meeting will be held in the Hall of Government at 8:15, with Irwin Nathanson chairman.

Dr. Brinley Thomas, a graduate of the University of London; Leon Dostert, French officer detailed to that nation's Embassy, and Count Anthony Tarnawski, in the Polish diplomatic service here since September 1, will speak.

Spite Your Critics

By Mark Sullivan

Roosevelt's Stand On Foreign Policy

PRESIDENT ROOSEVELT, at his press conference, was asked a question: Would he sever diplomatic relations with Russia? To this Mr. Roosevelt gave a sound answer: Nothing is contemplated at present; it is too early to decide.

From that, Mr. Roosevelt went on with a remarkable comment. As reported in the next morning's newspapers, all versions substantially agree, with each other and with the present writer's understanding as he listened. The version here quoted is from The Washington Post. This did not bring out, as much as some other versions, all the touches of barbed sarcasm which Mr. Roosevelt put into both his words and manner:

"He responded sarcastically to critics of the Administration's foreign policies and said the stand maintained to date had the approval of most Americans. Criticisms have come largely, he said, from the Soviet press, a portion of the Nazi press, the publicity director for the Republican National Committee whose name he said he did not recall, and the Hearst papers, all of which, he said, are substantially in accord in the attacks. Criticism has come also from statesmen in Russia, some in Germany and a comparatively small number of politically minded people in the United States House and Senate. He concluded that the foreign policies that Secretary of State Hull is carrying out from day to day must be pretty good."

Roosevelt Theory: Spite Your Critics

THE DELIBERATENESS of Mr. Roosevelt's utterance, and the form of it, suggested that he had thought it out in advance. As a comment on foreign policy, put out by the President of the United States, it is extraordinary. Factually, one would have to seek far for the evidence. Is there any such "accord" in criticism as would justify Mr. Roosevelt's grouping, in a common odium, the seven contemned sources that Mr. Roosevelt listed—a grouping more emotionally angry, and politically effective, than factually sound:

The Soviet press.
A portion of the Nazi press.
The publicity director of the Republican National Committee.
The Hearst papers.
Statesmen in Russia.
Some statesmen in Germany.
Some politically minded persons in the United States Senate and House.

But let us assume Mr. Roosevelt is factually correct. Even so, is this an adequate test of the soundness of foreign policy? So far as one can wrench any logic out of it, it amounts to saying: If a policy is criticized by those you don't like, it is, because of that very fact, a good policy.

That is a poor ground for decision, on any question, national or individual. Yet just that method is practiced by many persons, in whom emotion prevails over reason. The method, reduced to simplicity, is: Find out what your critics would like you to do—then do the opposite. The result is, your decisions are determined, not by yourself but by your critics and opponents. Not a few persons go through life that way.

Lincoln Elevated McClellan, His Foe

THERE IS COMING to Washington next month, and to the rest of the county, a motion picture which is described, by persons who have seen previews of it, as strikingly excellent. It is called "Lincoln in Illinois." In it, or perhaps in Carl Sandburg's recent biography of Lincoln, Mr. Roosevelt might find, remuneratively to himself and to the country, a Lincoln story, which is here repeated from memory—doubtless many readers will recall it more exactly:

Lincoln had made McClellan general of his armies. McClellan, in private conversations and even publicly, criticized Lincoln bitterly, told unbecoming stories about him. This was reported to Lincoln by friends, who told Lincoln he ought, for this cause, to dismiss McClellan. Lincoln replied: "I only expect Gen. McClellan to win the war for me—if he will do that, I am willing to hold his horse's bridle."

A surmise about Mr. Roosevelt's irritation—and this is a surmise only—might say he is harassed by conflict within himself. It is safe to assume he feels about Russia's invasion of Finland as most Americans do and that he would like to express his indignation by abrupt and conspicuous action. But he may be deterred from severing diplomatic relations by several considerations. He may be deterred by considerations of principle or of justified expediency. Almost certainly the reasons, pro and con, are better known to Mr. Roosevelt and to Secretary of State Hull than to their critics.

Some New Dealers Courted Russia

OR, MR. ROOSEVELT may be conscious of the distress of spirit about Russia that has been brought upon some New Dealers. For several years some New Dealers courted Russia; in some cases took inspiration from Russia. Now, since Russia's pact with Nazi, they are obliged to condemn Russia. Their change of attitude, as expressed in their relations with the Russian Ambassador in Washington, is described by columnists Alsop and Kintner:

"In the old days, Ambassador Oumansky was decidedly popular among extreme New Deal leftwingers and their numerous friends and camp followers . . . The left-wing New Dealers, like liberals all over the world, clung to their faith in the Soviet Union until the last breathless moment. Now their bitterness is compounded by their disillusion."

U. S. Housing Agencies Wreck Commerce's Cost Research Plan

FHA and HOLC Oppose Hopkins' Program; Budget Bureau Refuses Funds; Part May Be Salvaged

By Alfred Friendly.

For the first time in the history of the New Deal, Federal housing agencies have agreed on an objective—the torpedoing of an incipient low-cost housing program in the Department of Commerce, a cherished dream of Secretary Hopkins.

An attempt to salvage the wreckage of the plan—a research and demonstration project to encourage private construction of houses to cost not more than $2,500—will be made at a conference tomorrow. Commerce officials and representatives of Government housing organizations will attend.

Commerce officials refuse to discuss any phase of the scheme, under orders of "no publicity whatsoever." It was learned some months ago, however, when the project was planned, that it entailed research into new construction methods, cheaper materials and methods of building, and the erection of demonstration homes for display throughout the country.

Budget Refuses Funds

The Budget Bureau was the nominal executioner of Hopkins' plan, in refusing a request for $1,000,000 to carry it out, but the actual headsman was Federal Housing Administrator Stewart McDonald.

Opposition to the program came early from McDonald, who obtained agreement from Commerce officials to discontinue any talk about their plans, although the proposal was to have been initiated with considerable fanfare of publicity.

From the start, Hopkins' project was loaded with dynamite of a different sort than that which set off detonations in other Federal Housing agencies.

First, the plans to build $2,500 houses by private industry on a large scale entailed revision of the outmoded, but highly treasured building codes throughout the country. These codes, it was explained, are often the implements of manufacturers and laborers alike, forcing the installation of certain types of material requiring high amounts of building labor, when cheaper substitutes would serve as well. Therefore attempts to alter them have always met bitter opposition.

Second, the proposal challenged the whole structure of building material and labor prices.

Third, it would have repercussions in the existng practices and methods of the building trades unions

The project envisioned the traveling display of model houses, with the idea these would stimulate would-be home owners to demand their production and to level the barriers preventing their erection.

A few weeks ago, when the request for funds was made, the Budget Bureau questioned the FHA and other housing organizations on whether the project was desirable and if it duplicated the work of other agencies. FHA carried the ball in the opposition, with the Home Owners Loan Corporation running interference. A division of sentiment is officially reported in the U. S. Housing Authority, but in view of USHA's difficulty in obtaining the money for its own research operations it can be assumed that Nathan Straus' organization was not overly enthusiastic.

FHA officials are frank in admitting their opposition to the program, arguing that construction of $2,500 houses is impossible for many years, and that anyway, the FHA is taking steps to reduce building costs. With HOLC officers, they agree that the muddled Government housing field is weird enough, without the addition of another agency, especially when the agency has haa no experience.

The FHA insists that $2,500 houses are difficult to finance. Banks are unwilling to take the risk of a $350 foreclosure cost in many States when the down payment received on a $2,500 house would amount only to $125.

In addition, it was argued materials represent only about one-half of the cost of a house and that the Bureau of Standards is already doing everything possible to reduce material prices.

More to the point, however, is FHA's frank charge that the Commerce Department was "trying to make a lot of ballyhoo about reducing the prices of houses by research," and that publicity about "cheaper houses next year" would hurt the sales of "goods we have on the shelves."

Blocked by the Budget Bureau, the project has been dumped in the lap of the Central Housing Committee. Some effort is expected to be made at tomorrow's conference to find ways and means for carrying on part of the program in other agencies, and to determine how far Commerce can progress without extra funds.

Today And Tomorrow

The Political Economy Of This War

BOTH HERE and abroad there are many reassuring signs of a growing consensus of informed opinion about how the economy of wartime should be managed. The object to be attained is reasonably clear and is now more generally understood than it was in the last war.

Thus it is now known that the really serious and lasting destructiveness of war, apart from the loss of human life, is not in the physical destruction of property in battle, not in the economic waste of the huge armaments but in the permanent dislocation of the normal markets for trade and in the internal disruption caused by the inflation of prices, wages, and government budgets. The peoples found it easy enough to repair the physical devastation of the last war; what they were never able to repair successfully and adequately was the disorganization of commerce and the revolutionary distortion of incomes, costs of production, wages and prices within the various countries.

The task of economic statesmanship is to prevent that from happening again. The broad outline of the policy can, I think, already be discerned.

Unused Goods, Men Still Are Plentiful

IT IS A POLICY in two main phases, that of the present and that of the most probable future.

Taking the free economic world as a whole, that is to say, the world which is not totalitarian and is not blockaded—the world which includes the Allies and practically all the neutrals—there are still in spite of the wasteful consumption of war, large stocks of raw materials, fairly large inventories in many goods, a large volume of unemployed and underemployed labor, and in most, though not all branches of production, a considerable unutilized plant capacity. Even Great Britain and France are not yet at their maximum productive capacity. There are still available plants and labor which are not fully employed at necessary work. Obviously, that is even more true of the Dominions, of the European and American neutrals, and above all of the United States.

As long as this condition prevails we shall still be in the first phase of the war economy. And in this first phase, marked by the fact that potential supply is still greater than effective demand, there is no likelihood of a serious inflationary rise in prices, wage rates and costs of production.

Antitrust Laws Must Be Enforced

The chief problem in the first phase is to manage the increase of production so as to avoid stoppages at natural or artificial bottle necks. By a natural bottle neck is meant, for example, the shortage of skilled labor which is due in part to the fact that during 10 years of depression so many young men have not had the opportunity to learn skilled trades. The remedy here is industrial training, subsidized, one might hope, out of some of the funds that have been badly spent on mere relief. By an artificial bottle neck is meant, of course, monopolistic price controls, monopolistic union activity to jack up some wage rates and to exclude new workers, and tariffs, external and domestic, designed to limit supply and restrict the market.

The remedy here is to enforce the antitrust laws, if necessary by prosecution and litigation, but better still by persuading businessmen and labor leaders that the wise policy for them is to aim at a large volume of business and employment with moderate prices and wages, rather than at speculative profiteering. As long as we are still in the first phase of the war economy, the pressure being exerted by the Department of Justice and by Senator O'Mahoney's committeee, plus the enlightenment of the best industrialists, ought to be sufficient.

But toward the end of this phase, which may be sooner or later, depending on how active the war becomes, the effect of our own recovery, combined with the war demand, will cause rising prices in goods and services. At this point we shall see the really amazing unwisdom of those Republicans, like Senator Vandenberg, who are starting to agitate in favor of a higher tariff. For if there was ever a time when tariffs ought to be lowered rather than raised, it is a time when goods are beginning to be scarce and the cost of living is beginning to rise. And since that time is likely to be upon us by next summer, the Republicans must not be astonished if they find that once more, as in the case of the embargo, most of them have guessed wrong and gotten off on the wrong foot.

Dangerous Phase Of War Economy

AS A MATTER of fact, it is extremely probable that toward the end of the first phase, the case will be very strong for substantial reductions of the tariff on manufactured goods and luxuries. We shall want more imports to keep down the rising cost of living, and to provide means of payment for munitions under the cash provisions of the neutrality law, and to prevent the currencies of the other free nations from getting too seriously out of line with our own currency.

The Allies will, of course, enter the second phase of war economy earlier than we do. But, if the war continues into 1941, we, too, shall reach a stage where the effective demand for goods is greater than the available supply. This is the dangerous phase of the war economy, for this is when prices and wage rates tend to be sucked into a vicious inflationary spiral. Fixed incomes, pensions, bank deposits, government salaries, contracts and bonds are subjected to a cruel, hidden and indiscriminate tax. The profiteer and the speculator flourish. Capital is tempted into imprudent investments. And the habits and expectations of the whole community are thrown into disorder. If these dangers are not averted, the end of the war means a violent industrial collapse accompanied by revolutionary discontent.

The British and French being nearer to this second phase, it is most encouraging to see how consciously and how resolutely they have set out to deal with it. Though we still have time here, we, too, should be preparing our minds to prevent the menace of a war inflation.

We Must Prepare For Crucial Period

IN THE SECOND phase, when demand is really greater than supply, an inflationary rise of prices cannot be stopped by prosecuting or persecuting businessmen and labor leaders who advance prices and wage rates. In this phase the only way to prevent inflation is to work more, to save more and to consume less. That means that the restrictions on the hours of work and on output will need to be relaxed. It means that the taxes will have to be increased. It means that government, corporate, and private borrowing will have to be financed out of actual savings, and not out of inflationary credit created by the banks.

We have not yet reached this phase. But if the war continues and becomes more intense, we shall reach it, and we ought now to educate ourselves and prepare our measures for this crucial period. For on our success in dealing with its problems will depend, almost as much as upon the military and political development of the war, how we shall emerge from the crisis and what kind of world we shall live in when the war is over.

flights, the communique said.

Stockholm, Sweden, Dec. 6 (AP).—Huge Russian forces advancing at tremendous cost on the Karelian Isthmus front were reported today from Viipuri by the Dagensnyheter correspondent, who said whole companies of the Reds, advancing in line, were moved down by Finnish machine guns and artillery.

The Russian front line forces on that front, including the air force, are at least 100,000 men, with another 100,000 held as a reserve force, the Finnish commander, Alexander Meelblom, told a woman writer.

(Helsinki military experts estimated that the Russians had only about 200,000 men engaged in the campaign on all fronts.)

She described the Russians as marching through the woods and wherever the rugged terrain permitted, with tanks and artillery. Infantry sent ahead of the tanks was being mowed down by the Finns, but seemingly endless new forces and materials were brought up to replace them.

Quoting Finnish officers on Russian losses, the correspondent wrote, "Whole companies advancing in line were moved down by Finnish artillery and infantry in thousands. Many Russians have no leggings, only overshoes, which were filled with straw and bound with cord."

200,000 Halted, Finns Say

By the Associated Press

Helsinki, Dec. 6.—Finland's general staff announced tonight that assaults of 200,000 soldiers of the army of Red Russia had been repulsed on all three fronts.

Eighty Russian tanks have been wrecked since the war started last Thursday, the staff announcement said, and 36 planes brought down.

In today's battles on the southern front, it was announced eight enemy tanks were destroyed near Valkjarvi, near the center of the Karelian Isthmus. Valkjarvi is about nine miles from the Russian border.

On the northern front, where the Finns were fighting with machineguns and automatic rifles in snowdrifts six feet deep, the Finns announced the Russians had bombed Petsamo, Arctic port, and Pitkaranta "without success."

The Finns said they brought down two of the planes.

Estonia Called On, Say Finns

Helsinki, Dec. 6 (U.P.).—Russia tonight was reported to have called on Estonia, across the Gulf of Finland, for greater military aid in crushing Finnish resistance and Tallinn dispatches said that Gen. Johan Laidoner, commander in chief of the Estonian armed forces, was summoned to Moscow yesterday.

The Russians were said to have driven to the outer fringes of Finland's Mannerheim line of fortifications on the Karelian Isthmus north of Leningrad in an 11-mile advance.

The Finns fell back stubbornly under assaults of tanks and armored cars.

(A Helsinki dispatch to the Rome newspaper Popolo di Roma said the Russians had launched a big offensive with 700,000 troops, with one army advancing from Karelia and the other striking across the country in the Salmi region north of Lake Ladoga in an attempt to cut the country in two.)

Russia Says Finn Line Is Broken

eagerness to "fight the Russians as we did in Spain."

Italy is strongly anti-Communist. Her controlled press in recent weeks has frequently warned Russia against any attempt to dominate the Balkans. Italy has been the leader in efforts to organize the Balkan states into a single bloc—neutral in the Anglo-French war against Germany and peaceful among themselves to avoid any possibility of excuse for intervention by Russia.

A peaceful Balkan region is necessary to Germany, since the Balkan states are important sources of food and other supplies, particularly now that Britain's blockade has cut Germany off from other sources.

Now the Comintern publication warns Rumania to ally herself with Russia, and exhorts the Rumanian peasants and workers to throw off the "shackles of imperialist capitalist powers.

On the heels of that hint to Rumania, Germany's Minister in Turkey yesterday saw the Turkish foreign minister who also has been working for a Balkan neutral bloc, but not in collaboration with Italy.

Turkey With Allies

Turkey is an ally of Britain and France. Britain and France have guaranteed the independence of Greece and Rumania. Turkey, Greece, Rumania and Yugoslavia are allied in the Balkan Entente. Hungary is understood to have decided that in event of a Soviet attack on Rumania, she will occupy Transylvania, the western part of Rumania.

This complicated network of interests and obligations is such that any disturbance of the peace and security of one Balkan country probably would affect all the others. War in the Balkans would seriously menace Germany's food sources—and her supply of oil from Rumania.

Hungary, Germany's neighbor, is strongly anti-Communist. The sudden emergence of Russia as a neighbor of Hungary has created anxiety in Budapest. Yesterday's rumor, through Anglo-French channels, of an "incident" on the new Russo Hungarian border, may not be true, but there still exists the possibility of incidents.

Troops Reported in Near East

A few days ago, German newspapers published articles likening Russia's position to that of Alexander the Great, in that they said Russia is now in a position to move into the Near East, and Middle East, and even toward India. The inference was, of course, that Germany's friend would then be harassing the French, British and Turkey. Yesterday reports of Soviet concentrations in the Caucasus on the Iran and Iraq borders, were revived in Paris.

But Russia's only response yesterday to the German suggestion of opportunities for Soviet expansion in Western Asia was the threat to Rumania, and no threat as yet to Iran and Iraq, whence comes much of Britain's oil.

By proper maneuvering, it was said, a ship can in many cases avoid a torpedo, and similarly sail through a mine bed with less chance of touching off an explosion.

Safety Factors Cited

By application of what the Navy calls "damage control," taking necessary repairs and shutting off damaged compartments, ships crippled by torpedoes or mines often can be kept afloat.

The merchant officer also will be taught gunnery, antiaircraft tactics, convoy duty and other wartime essentials. Naval officials have long wanted to establish such a school, but funds were lacking.

Only about 20 officers will be in the first of the eight-week classes. It is planned to increase the number.

Rank of Ensign Assigned

Officers assigned to Coast Guard cutters will have the rank of ensign in the maritime service, and stand watches on the neutrality patrol vessels. They will be given special instruction in gunnery and antisubmarine tactics.

One hundred posts aboard cutters are available. Only a few merchant officers have applied as yet. Many of the officers assigned to ships formerly operating to belligerent ports or neutrals in the barred war zones still have jobs, it was said.

Park Savings Bank Depositors Will Get $400,000

Distribution of $400,000 to 11,000 persons, representing a 12½ per cent payment to depositors in the defunct Park Savings Bank, will begin at 9 a. m. today in offices on the second floor of the Park Road Postal substation, 1413 Park road northwest.

Receiver John F. Moran said yesterday he expects about half the checks to be distributed during the first three days. The office will be open from 9 a. m. to 8 p. m. today and tomorrow, and from 9 a. m. to 5 p. m. daily, and 9 a. m. to noon Saturday.

"We want to get rid of these checks as quick as we can," said Moran.

Friendship Group To Study Plans For Reorganization Of D. C. Offices

A resolution calling for the appointment of a committee to study the reorganization of District government was adopted at a meeting of the Friendship Citizens Association last night.

The association also adopted resolutions asking for the construction of raised concrete loading platforms on both sides of Wisconsin avenue northwest, and protesting against the unswept condition of alleys in the area.

A large part of the meeting, which was attended by 75 members, was devoted to the discussion of a playground and park, requested in a resolution adopted at the last meeting. The proposed recreation area is bound by Yuma street, Alton place, Forty-fifth and Forty-sixth streets northwest.

Traffic Signal Pledged

At the request of a large delegation of Yuma street residents, who claimed the playground would lower the value of their property, the association rescinded its previous resolution.

A committee report revealed that Traffic Director William A. Van Duzer has agreed to erect a traffic signal at Tenley Circle and Wisconsin avenue northwest. Van Duzer was also reported as having promised to place a signal at Fessenden street and Wisconsin avenue northwest, if possible.

Four new members were admitted —Dennis Conners, J. J. Stubbs, Mrs. J. S. Hersey and Bryan Coe.

Oldest Inhabitants

Washington's Oldest Inhabitants last night re-elected most of their present officers and completed plans for their seventy-fourth annual banquet at the Raleigh Hotel tonight.

J. Elliot Wright, recording secretary for 19 years and treasurer for 10, told the group he was retiring "reluctantly because of disability." First Vice President John Clagett Proctor thanked him for "fidelity, sincerity, care and efficiency." He was given a vote of thanks.

John B. Dickman, one of 13 vice presidents, was elected to fill Wright's post. Wright was then elected to the honorary post of assistant recording secretary.

Other officers include Theodore W. Noyes, president; vice presidents, Proctor, Dickman, Christian Heurich, Charles A. Langley, George Spransy, Fred A. Emery, Joseph I. Keefer, John R. Mahoney, Eira C. Palmer, Walter E. Allen, Jesse C. Suter, Anthony Denekas and Dr. Hugh M. Smith; corresponding secretary, James F. Duhamel; financial secretary, Mahoney; marshal, Harry A. Burr; chronicler, Proctor; delegates to the Federation of Citizens Associations, Proctor and Duhamel.

District Atttorney David A. Pine will address the banquet at 7:30 p. m. today. A reception will precede the banquet.

Ralph A. Shepard Funeral Services To Be Tomorrow

Funeral services for Ralph A. Shepard, 60, Internal Revenue Bureau section chief, who died yesterday in Mount Alto Hospital, will be conducted at 2:30 p. m. tomorrow from the Hines funeral chapel.

Mr. Shepard was chief of the taxpayers' ruling section, No. 1, practice and procedure division of the income tax unit of the bureau.

A native of Washington, Mr. Shepard received his education at the old Business High School and the National University Law School. After service in the War and Treasury departments, he was sent in 1914 to The Hague as an officer responsible for the return of United States citizens.

From 1917 to 1919 he served in the Army, then became attached to the Internal Revenue Bureau.

Burial will be in Glenwood Cemetery.

Main intersection of "Safety Town." Traffic was heavy there yesterday, but was handled with ease

More than 100 Madison School youngsters yesterday turned traffic safety instruction into an exciting game at a miniature intersection set up on Sherwood Playground.

Classes were dismissed early to populate the American Automobile Association's "Safety Town." The pint-sized city consists of four blocks roped off and bordered by sidewalks 4 feet wide.

At the main intersection the Department of Vehicles and Traffic mounted standard stop-and-go signals, while the A. A. A. provided a fleet of eight toy autos, operated by foot pedals.

Lively struggles for the privilege of running the cars marked the first half hour of the demonstration at Sherwood Playground, but traffic began to flow more smoothly as the children took turns at the wheels of the tiny red machines.

Youthful pedestrians solemnly took their cues from the red, green and amber lights, under the guidance of six members of the boy safety patrol.

The District Recreation Department, added to the realism of Safety Town by erecting house and store fronts at the intersection. The stage setting included one heavily padlocked door marked "Jail," but Madison pupils who moved against the lights were let off with a word of warning.

School Board Backs Course In Sociology

Ballou Recommends Second-Semester Training Be Given

A new second-semester course in sociology was approved yesterday by the Board of Education upon the recommendation of Dr. Frank W. Ballou, superintendent of schools.

"Several of the senior high schools have tried out this new course and have become very enthusiastic of its possibilities," said Dr. Ballou. "It has the unanimous approval of the ten senior high school principals and of the assistant superintendents concerned."

Dr. Ballou was given discretionary authority to oppose issuance of a liquor license to a store in the 100 block of E street southeast. A hearing on the application will be held by the Alcoholic Beverage Control Board before the school board's next meeting.

The board also received a report of accidents to children during the school year. During the nine months, 718 accidents were reported to principals of elementary, senior high, junior high and vocational schools, and 296 of these mishaps were in playgrounds. Comparatively few were serious.

According to the study, prepared by Principal R. W. Eaves of Thomson School, and N. A. Danowsky, statistician, there were 21 traffic injuries but no deaths.

High schools reported 142 accidents, led by Dunbar with 40 and Central with 35. Cardoza and Western had the fewest, four each.

Among the junior high and vocational schools, where accidents totaled 319, the leaders were Langley, 51; Deal, 41, and Anacostia, 39. The elementary schools in the third division were scenes of 69 accidents, 23 more than the next highest division, No. 11.

Increased Cultural and Trade Relations Urged for Americas

Inter-American Center of G. W. U. Sponsors Discussion of Problems Concerning Western Hemisphere

Recommendations for increased cultural and trade relations in the Western Hemisphere and a lively exposition of the part women are playing in development of the Americas were given an audience of more than 250, under auspices of the Inter-American Center of George Washington University last night at the United States Chamber of Commerce.

A seven-point program for improving cultural relations was advanced by Prof. Lloyd E. Blauch, consultant in Inter-American Relations of the United States Office of Education. Among these were studies of Latin America in schools and colleges, furtherance of international houses, formation of Pan-American student clubs, interchange of students and professors and activities of Government agencies.

Student Interchange Hampered

Interchange of students, he said, has been hampered by the fact that Latin-American methods, while not inferior to those of North America, offer great difficulties to the North American student, although 1,064 Latin-American students were in colleges in this country last year.

"The situation in Europe and Asia," he said, "has made it clear to the people in the Americas that they must work together if peace and order are to be preserved on the western continent and western civilization is to be saved for the generations of the future."

Woman's role in politics is not incompatible with her place in the home, said Senorita Mercedes Guerra, of Havana, representative on the peoples mandate committee, because "home and country are inseparable." The country, she said, "is the common home of all and we women, in helping to save our country are only saving our homes."

"The culture of our women," she declared, "is greatly enriched by participation in political life . . . All over the Americas women are proving that the theory of our mental inferiority is but a myth."

Banker Heard

William T. Moran, assistant vice president, National City Bank of New York, said discussion of Latin America as a market too often overlooks "the availability or nonavailability of dollar exchange which the Latin-American importer must have to pay his American suppliers." Increased Latin-American buying due to the war, he said, has largely disappeared with assurance of sufficient American bottoms to transport goods.

The speakers were questioned by a panel consisting of Henry Grattan Doyle, professor of Romance Languages and Dean of Columbian College; James Christopher Corliss, associate professor of Intern-American Economics, and Antonio Alonso, assistant professor of Spanish.

William Crane Johnstone, jr., professor of political science and dean of the Junior College, presided as chairman.

800 Cafe Men Dine as Climax Of Convention

'Earned Night of Fun,' Says Head, Explaining Lack of Speakers

More than 800 restaurant owners and their families from ten Southeastern States crowded into the grand ballroom at the Mayflower Hotel last night for a banquet that concluded their three-day conference here.

There were no speakers and no speaker's table. "The delegates have earned a night of fun," Washington President J. Willard Marriott said. The banquet honored Marriott and National President A. A. McVittie, of Denver, Colo.

"This entire convention," Marriott pointed out, "was an educational one for the benefit of the consuming public. Its purpose was the exchange of ideas that would lead to the betterment of service."

Praising Washington restaurants, McVittie said he thought "everyone in Washington ought to eat out." "As a matter of fact," he went on, everybody seems to eat out. I drove up to a drive-in restaurant yesterday and thought I was at Times Square in New York."

"For geniality," he said, "Washington reminds me of the West, not the East."

Nick Marcitelli, chef for the occasion, walked through the ballroom looking anxiously from table to table to discover how the connoisseurs of food were taking his repast. A number of New York entertainers and Washington vaudeville artists performed.

The afternoon conference heard a talk by Harold A. Clark, of the District Public Schools, on employe training. Other discussion subjects included restaurant personnel, menu planning, education the public to eat in cafetrias and legislative vigilance.

2d Traffic Adviser Asks Block Timing

Hege Joins Wender In Advocating D. C. Experiment on Through Streets

An experiment with a "block" timing of traffic on main streets was indorsed enthusiastically last night by Edwin S. Hege, member of the Traffic Advisory Council for 12 years.

Hege, chairman of the council's committee on safety promotion and education, said he intended to support such an experiment at the next council meeting December 15.

"I feel the present progressive traffic light timing does not work at maximum efficiency whenever, and wherever, there is a solid stream of traffic," said Hege.

Favors Experiment Period

The "progressive" timing system makes traffic lights show all green, or all red, for much shorter distances than would the "block" timing system. A recent series of articles in The Post outlined results of a survey on traffic lights and advocated longer signal cycles in rush hours, as well as an increased speed limit.

"The block system certainly should be tried for an experimental period, at least, on a few north and south streets during morning and evening peaks when we are filling, or emptying, the downtown section," Hege declared.

Hege said he was not ready to say what streets should be used for the experiment, but Sixteenth street, suggested probably would be one of them.

Stresses Speed-up Need

Hege lives in Chevy Chase and gets "into the stream" of north and southbound traffic every day. "I've been doing it for years, and I know how the traffic tangles," said the council member.

"The mass transportation load must be moved faster," he said. "Certainly something can be done—some experiment tried."

Hege's statement he will support the move to try out "block" timing follows a similar one made Tuesday night by a fellow member of the Traffic Council. Harry S. Wender, chairman of the legislative and enforcement committee of the council, urged both "block" timing and an increased speed limit on major arteries.

Commissioner Hazen has announced he will ask the council to consider the changes on an "experimental" basis.

Beauty Queen At G. W. Wins Honor Key

VIRGINIA MOORE

Blonde Virginia Moore, last year's beauty queen on the George Washington University campus, became a Phi Beta Kappa answer yesterday to the old saying about beautiful girls being dumb.

Phi Beta Kappa, which picks students for scholastic attainments, chose Virginia for the usual reasons. Virginia has been a good student.

But last night the Zeta Tau Alpha girls were as proud of their old sorority sister for her good looks as for her good class record. They said the lissome coed was not only beautiful and smart, but also the example of a girl who could work at many trades, and be master of them all.

At various times, said the sorority girls, "Ginny" Moore has been university women's singles and doubles tennis champion, manager of badminton, and right halfback on the varsity hockey team. She has been in the social whirl as president of Zeta Tau Alpha, one of the leading sororities on the campus, and vice president of Delphia, honorary activities society.

To show just how busy Virginia likes to be the sorority girls pointed out that she is studying both fine and commercial art at the university—which is something of a neat trick, they said.

Then in the Zeta Tau Alpha chapter rooms on the campus Virginia spoke for herself.

"I'm particularly interested in fashion designing and illustrating, magazine illustration, advertising art, book jackets and theater sets—but I don't really have time for them all," the blue-eyed, 21-year-old girl said, adding reflectively, "You see, there's my Government work—that comes first right now."

While she's resting, Virginia really rests.

"I love deep, delicious sleep," she said. "Sleep, it's wonderful!"

D. C. Power Hookup to 2 Cities Urged

Spokesmen for U. S. And Industry See Advantage in Case of War

Connection by high-powered transmission lines of power facilities in Washington, Baltimore and Philadelphia will be of great help in meeting power needs in case the United States should become involved in war, spokesmen for the Government and the industry declared yesterday.

The National Power Policy Committee agreed with officials of the Potomac Electric Power Co. and Baltimore utility concerns that adequate generating capacity had been provided for to meet probable peacetime needs in the Washington-Baltimore area for the next two years.

Expect Changes

In a joint statement, the committee and officials of the companies said the public utilities in this area expected to make changes in their steam generating stations "that will increase their capacities beyond that needed for peacetime needs."

The hookup between the Washington and Baltimore plants, it was agreed, "results in maximum economy and effective use of the power resources." It is the kind of arrangement the Administration wants to see extended among utility plants in the industrial areas east of the Mississippi River.

RFC Loans Considered

President Roosevelt has revealed plans to make extension of the hookups a joint undertaking on the part of the Government and the industry. A program of loans by the Reconstruction Finance Corporation to build new transmission line hookups is being considered.

The National Power Policy Committee conferred Tuesday with officials of Pepco and the Baltimore utilities.

Yesterday it met with officials of utilities in the Birmingham area. The object of the series of conferences, which will continue through December 22, is to agree on power needs for national defense as well as on a program for building new hookups and, where necessary, new generating facilities.

Lloyd Again Conquers Sea in His New Epic

"Rulers of the Sea" Pictures Heroic Tale; "White Plume" for Christmas Premiere Here; This, That and the Other About the Theater

IT IS to his conspicuous credit that Producer-Director Frank Lloyd was able to capture so much of the bigness of his theme in his Paramount production of "Rulers of the Sea." Perhaps that was to be expected, however, from the man who was able to get so much of the tang of the open ocean into his earlier picturizations of Sabatini's "The Sea Hawk" and Nordoff and Hall's "Mutiny on the Bounty."

BELL

The earlier Lloyd sea pictures, it will be recalled, were intensely personalized melodramas pitched against heroic backgrounds. "Rulers of the Sea," previewed yesterday afternoon, offers contrasting qualities by presenting a presumably authentic recreation of the events leading up to the first crossing of the Atlantic under steam power, in which personal narrative is subordinated to the introduction of a new maritime epoch.

The time of the picture is a century ago. Its climax is reached in the first crossing of the ocean under engine power, in 1838, and the death aboard his ship of the inventor of the revolutionary engine from a scalding received from the product of his own genius. The story, too has its romantic moments, deftly woven into the more sturdy pattern of its major movement. As usual, Mr. Lloyd and his associate director, Lou Smith, have achieved storm scenes on the high seas that are fearfully realistic. In some of them the Dog Star, disabled in midocean, seems as tiny as one of Columbus' caravels when ranged alongside its old rival windjammer, The Falcon—a circumstance which, of course, adds tremendously to the excitement of the race from England to America.

While the ships are the stars of "Rulers of the Sea," the human performances by the principal members of the cast may not easily be ignored. Those who view the opening of the film on the Earle screen tomorrow will find themselves face to face with especially fine performances by Will Fyffe, Douglas Fairbanks, jr., Margaret Lockwood and George Bancroft.

We have waited a long time for this latest major effort of Frank Lloyd's. It is pleasant to be able to report that the picture proves to have been worth it.

Joe Cook, presenting his "Laugh Factory" revue on the stage at the Earle this week, really is in earnest about getting his new full-length production, tentatively titled "Buggy Ride," into rehearsal within a month. He already is in a huddle with his collaborators on the new venture. Tuesday night, for instance, he, Don Herold, noted cartoonist-writer, who is coauthoring the "book" with him; Chester Hale, famous dance director; John Hickey, one of Mr. Hale's right hands, and others spent many busy hours over their blueprints in a quiet corner of the Variety Club in the Willard Hotel. When Joe closes at the Earle tonight, he is hastening back to his estate, Sleepless Hollow, on Lake Hopatcong, to give his "Buggy Ride" definite direction. Mr. Hale, by the way, is just back from Cuba, where he is sending one of his dancing units—like the Texas Comets, now on Thirteenth street—for the winter tourist season.

When these new productions come along, Joe does not forget his old sidekicks. Charlie Senna, with him at the Earle, will have an important part as "chief stooge" in the new revue, just as he had in the Earl Carroll "Vanities" of 1923-24-25, in which Joe was starred, and in "Fine and Dandy" and "Hold Your Horses." The only reason he wasn't in "Rain or Shine" was that he was half of the vaudeville team of Burns and Senna that season and couldn't shake off his bookings. Mr. Senna is a very comical fellow.

Speaking of new musicals, the Messrs. Shubert's production of "The White Plume" will have its premiere in the National Theater in this city on Christmas night. This work has Edmond Rostand's famous romantic drama of "Cyrano de Bergerac" as its foundation and is reputed to be one of the most elaborate undertakings ever sponsored by the famous brothers from Syracuse. The cast will be headed by George Houston, as the Gargantuan-nosed Cyrano, and also will include Ruby Mercer, as Roxanne, and Eric Mattson, as Christian. Douglas Leavitt, Hope Emerson, Robert Chisholm, Joseph Holland, Nina Olivette, Hal Forde, Zella Russell, Cornell Wilde, Evelyn Case, Edward Roecker, Belita and Fred Sherman, Washington favorite, last seen at Olney last summer, also are importantly assigned.

And since we are on the subject, it is interesting that "Three After Three," costarring Simone Simon, Mary Brian and Mitzi Green, hung up a new boxoffice record in its first week at the Shubert Theater in Boston, the gross exceeding $23,000. Even with this flying start, new musical numbers are being added and the chorus increased. In its original form "Three After Three" stressed the Guy Bolton play on which it is based. Without emasculation of the original plot, the musical comedy features now are being built up. For instance, the first-act finale now is all music and dancing, whereas before, the curtain came down on a scene played by three people. "Three After Three" will be seen at the National after a two-week stop at the Forrest Theater in Philadelphia.

When the National Press Club tenders its annual dinner to President Roosevelt tonight, Lew Lehr, the eminent dialectician of Fox Movietone News, will be master of ceremonies. Having sat under the Lehr gavel a few times ourself, we can guarantee that the President will have more laughs than usually are packed into a single evening.

"Destry Rides Again," opening tomorrow at RKO-Keith's, with Jimmie Stewart and a revitalized Marlene Dietrich co-starred, is being held over at the Rivoli Theater in New York after the biggest first week the house has had in five years. Lockout crowds at every performance, including midnight showings. Who was that inspired oracle who said Dietrich was "boxoffice poison?"

In Hollywood

Hollywood, Dec. 6.

I was amused and more than a little sad that Henry Fonda gets a reprieve from those swell parts he's been getting, and doing so well, I might add, and gets a chance to make feminine hearts flutter, playing opposite Alice Faye in "Lillian Russell." Now, Hank's too sane an actor not to know that he appeals mentally and not romantically. And as for his playing Alexander Moore, Lillian's fourth husband, to whom he bears not the slightest resemblance, physically, mentally or spiritually—it's going to be a little hard to take. Speaking about Lillian Russell, some 23 years ago she came to dinner at our house and while we were dining, along come Fannie Ward who wanted us to hop over and see her new house sometime during the evening. Lillian said: !!Now Fanny and I haven't spoken for years. I don't know what the fued was all about, but if you're willing, Hedda, I'll be delighted to go over." So we went, and were shown through the house from top to bottom. And as we left Fanny's dressing roo mand walked through the bedroom, Lillian, with a great sweep of her hand said: "Ah, Fanny—your worshop." And the feud started all over again.

HOPPER

Alexander Korda is clipper-shipping back to England, where he'll make more pictures . . . Rosemary Lane, in New York supposedly 'til Christmas, where she was doing radio with Georgie Jessel, is back after a week in the big city. Which makes that secert engagement to Buddy Westmore more plausible.

Charlie Lamont, who's directing Tom Brown in "Oh, Johnny, How You Can Love" (what a title), yesterday enrolled his 3-year old daughter Charlene in U. C. L. A. Yes—that's what I thought; but it's true. The University is now enrolling children and they'll go from kindergarten through college in the same school. Charlene's the first, she starts in February . . . Walter Wanger paid a heavy tariff down on his lot. In "The House Across the Bay," Joan Bennett wore 25 changes of costume. One item alone, a silver fox coat cost $10,000.

Errol Flynn's dog "Arno" has been with him on the set in several pictures, and always behaved beautifully—never broke up a scene. But for the first time, in "Virginia City" Arno's barred from the set; he starts to yowl every time he hears Flynn speak. Errol says he's just heckling him.

Louella O. Parsons

Close-Ups and Long-Shots Of the Motion Picture Scene

Pitsburgh, Pa., Dec. 6 (DS).—Ginger Rogers won't have to worry about what she's going to do in 1940. In announcing "Bonne Chance," the Sascha Guitry original for Ginger, RKO has just about completed her next year's assignments which include the picture she is now making, "Primrose Path" and "The Enchanted Cottage" which is coming up. Both of these latter pictures are highly dramatic parts and RKO is anxious that Ginger make at least one light romantic comedy which "Bonne Chance" will give her.

LOUELLA PARSONS

I believe the Guitry story was made before as a French film, but was never released in this country. Anyway it is very gay and sophisticated. Speaking of Ginger, they tell me she is coming out of her shell. For a while she was giving Garbo cards and spades and beating her at her own game playing recluse. But Saturday night she was out stepping with Cesar Romero at the Beverly Wilshire and didn't even try to duck when the cameramen snapped their pictures. George Haight will produce "Bonne Chance" and Allan Scott will script.

I've always liked Kent Taylor on the screen and with the mad scramble for leading men I've never understood why he hasn't been boosted more. Well, at last he is going to get a break for he's been signed by RKO and the boys in the publicity department are going to town to make the very good looking Mr. Taylor a star name in 1940. His first assignment on his new home lot will be with Anne Shirley in "Anne of Windy Poplars," but I hear there is a very hot deal on the fire to loan him first to M-G-M for "I Take This Woman," with Hedy Lamarr and Spencer Tracy. I'm wagering now that with a couple of "A" pictures and just an even break to make good, Kent will go a long way.

Walter Brennan is the latest star under contract to Sam Goldwyn to join the exodus to the Twentieth Century-Fox lot. (If this keeps up only Sam will be left at his own studio.) Walter, who just about stole "Kentucky" in a supporting role, will be elevated to stardom at Twentieth Century when he reports for "Maryland," which will glorify the history of that State just as the original glorified the blue grass country. A second company unit headed by Norman Foster is already in Maryland shooting scenes of local color and the famous landmarks. So far, however, Gene Markey has not yet assigned a director to the film which starts in February.

Chatter in Hollywood: Alfred Lunt absolutely wowed the first nighters at "The Taming of the Shrew" by pulling a John Barrymore and kidding the late arrivals from the stage. They tell me that Jawn's "ad libbing" in Chicago wasn't any funnier than what Alfred said under his breath when Broderick Crawford's large party came in quite late. All Hollywood turned out to give Lunt and Lynn Fontanne a great reception. Charlie Chaplin was working, so Paulette Goddard came with John McClain. Norma Shearer and George Raft, the Jack Warners, John Garfield and Louis B. Mayer were just a few of the movie crowd on hand to greet the famous stage stars.

Snapshots of Hollywood and Pittsburgh collected at random: Just received a wire that the handsome stranger with Joan Crawford at the Victor Hugo, after "The Taming of the Shrew," was John Emery — Tallulah Bankhead's estranged husband; little Peter Bennett leaves Hollywood the fifteenth to join Connie in New York for the Christmas holidays; the Edward Dmytry's (he's directing "Golden Gloves") expect the stork in July; it's snowing in Pittsburgh which didn't keep us from going to the University of Pittsburgh collegiate hop last night and having the time of our lives; Dick Powell called long distance to say he's heading home soon because he won't let anything keep him from Joan and the children at Christmas.

Billy Bakewell and Natalie Draper did a duet at Slapsy Maxie's. Sad to hear of the passing of Maxie's mother while he was in New York; after weeks of barnstorming in the East, Marie Wilson gets back to Hollywood and, of course, her favorite boy friend, Nick Grinde, will be at the station to meet her; Joe E. Brown's little girl, Kathryn, is in the California-Lutheran Hospital suffering from a skull fracture after falling off a horse; Arleen Whelan is plenty happy because Alex D'Arcy wired her he'll be in New York to spend Christmas with her when he finishes in "Irene;" George Brent has lost five pounds exercising at Palm Springs; Charles Boyer is taking English lessons every day to brush up on his "American" accent.

That's all for today. See you tomorrow!

Bill Robinson and a company of 150 jitterbugs bring the Gilbert and Sullivan classic up to date Monday evening at the National Theater, after a Broadway run and an engagement in shortened form at the New York World's Fair. Principals supporting the great colored tap-dancer include Rose Brown, Freddie Robinson, Alice Harris and Maurice Ellis. Matinees, Wednesday and Saturday.

The New Yorker

By Leonard Lyons

New York, Dec. 6.

PAUL V. McNUTT, aspirant for the Democratic Presidential nomination, will take the arena for his party at the Gridiron Dinner in Washington. Gov. Harold Stassen of Minnesota will be the Republican spokesman there . . . Charles M. Schwab's secretary, who bequeathed $500,000 in the will of the late steel magnate, will be disappointed—together with other legatees. The estate has dwindled alarmingly . . . Representative John J. O'Connor, who was purged by Roosevelt, soon will announce that he's a candidate for the mayoralty of New York. . . . Fritz Mandl, the former husband of Hedy Lamarr and who found asylum in England, is here to organize Britain's purchases of war materials.

JOSEPHINE TIGHE WILLIAMS, the veteran newspaper woman, for many years has been conducting a column based on events which transpired "75 years ago today" . . . This column was syndicated throughout the entire South, but now is being discontinued and probably will not be resumed for one year . . . The discontinuance of the feature in these Southern papers is no reflection upon the merits of Mrs. Williams' column. It's due to the fact that 75 years ago the South started to lose the Civil War.

JIM FARLEY is backing his brother for the job of United States Marshal here . . . The students at New York's Seward Park High School are petitioning LaGuardia for permission to accept the invitation for the intersectional football game in Miami this month. LaGuardia, however, has no power to intercede. The State Board of Regents is the official body which banned such games . . . Luther Adler is expected to get the leading role in Elmer Rice's new play . . . 21 local civic and benevolent organizations have banded together to help support the 60 English-teaching classes for refugees—classes which had been shut down as an economy move.

AT THE COLONY RESTAURANT Monday Doris Duke and her husband, Jimmy Cromwell, were surprised to find news photographers in the foyer—camera men who ignored them . . . Barbara Hutton arrived, escorted by Robert Sweeny—and they too were shocked to discover that the photographers weren't asking them to pose . . . A checkup revealed that, despite the presence of a roofful of socialites, the real celebrities in the place were Mr. and Mrs. James C. Lewis. The Lewises had been directed by Magistrate Curran to dine and be entertained at the expense of the building contractors whose construction work had kept them awake . . . And so the secondary celebrities—the Cromwells, Miss Hutton and Mr. Sweeny—agreed to pose for the news camera men as an appropriate background for the Lewis story.

THE INCOME TAX BUREAU is investigating a Presidential hopeful, because of an alleged 2 per cent assessment paid by the members of his State organization . . . Wendy Russell is the nude now modeling at Fefe's Monte Carlo . . . Jacqueline Susann of Harry Bannister's new show is being baited by the film scouts . . . Thyra Samter Winslow had her nose banged by the glamour girls in the scramble for prize balloons at the Stork Club Sunday night.

JIM FARLEY now is more anxious than ever to head his party's ticket next year. He is distressed at the thought that Roosevelt as yet has failed to recognize that ambition . . . In Washington last week Farley confided: "I don't mind the President's building up some one else for the job. But what gets me is the fact that, after all I've done, not once has he asked me: 'Jim—are you a candidate for the Presidency?' "

BARBARA HUTTON is paying $20,000 rent for her Palm Beach home this season—and took it "sight unseen." Her friend, Bob Sweeny, will occupy the famous octagonal house owned by Boutet de Montevein . . . Representative Marvin Jones, chairman of the Committee on Agriculture, will become a Judge of the Court of Claims in Washington next month . . . Frederick T. Birchall, who was the New York Times' foreign correspondent for many years, won't return to Europe while the war is on. "Life in a blackout country is too tough at my age," he explains. In Paris he was carried forcibly to an air-raid shelter when he refused to heed a 3 a. m. alarm.

BENNETT CERF, the Random House publisher, reviewed Noel Coward's new book of short stories for the Herald Tribune and concluded his review with the statement: "The only thing left for Noel Coward to do is either write a book about war—or have a baby" . . . Irita Van Doran of the Herald Tribune changed that line and eliminated "or have a baby" . . . Cerf read the review and registered complaint. "Come, come," Irita replied, "are you a publisher—or an outraged author?"

Vanishing Red Man Is Hunted By Studios

The "vanishing American" may be vanishing no longer in the rest of the country, as reported by the census takers of the Bureau of Indian Affairs, but in Hollywood he is practically doing a blackout.

There are only 15 full-blooded Indians available to pictures in the screen capital as against 250 five years ago, Mel Ballerino, Paramount casting director, has revealed.

In addition there are but 40 "usable" part-breeds, a classification on which there are no previous figures.

Hundreds of redskins are used in "Geronimo," story of the Apache war lord who terrorized the Southwest a half century ago, featuring Preston Foster, Ellen Drew, Andy Devine, Ralph Morgan and Chief Thunder Cloud, a full-blooded Cherokee—but most of them were brought from throughout Southern California.

Cecil B. De Mille is taking his "Northwest Mounted Police" company to British Columbia and Idaho to obtain Indians, as much as to procure scenic backgrounds.

And Twentieth Century-Fox imported hundreds of Blackfeet from Yellowstone for "Susannah of the Mounties," starring Shirley Temple.

"The Department of the Interior reports that the Indian population is increasing," says Ballerino, "but we have to go to the reservations to get 'em. In the old days we had more Indians than we knew what to do with."

Among the pictures needing Indians are Fox's "Drums Along the Mohawk," M. G. M.'s "Northwest Passage," Warner's "The Life of Haym Solomon" and Columbia's "Tree of Liberty," which will be directed by Frank Lloyd.

Wanted: A Duck That Can March

Warner Brothers property men have scattered in every direction on a duck hunt that has them baffled.

And one of them, before 2 hours have elapsed, had better return to the studio with a duck that knows how to march rather than waddle.

A military duck is essential for a scene in "The Fighting Sixty-ninth." The bird must be trained to keep step with a company of marching soldiers and follow Frank McHugh like a heeling dog.

So far, all ducks tested have fluttered frantically out from under the marching feet.

Has anybody got a military duck?

Huge Studio Trek To Capture Color

The Painted Desert and Grand Canyon will be captured in their natural beauty by the Technicolor camera for the first time in a major motion picture when Warner Brothers films "Virginia City" on those locations.

Planned as one of the biggest location expeditions in film history, Warners will send the entire cast and company of "Virginia City" to Flagstaff, Ariz., for six weeks. Errol Flynn will head the party of more than 200 players.

For the huge location, enough equipment and electrical material to supply a small-sized city is being crated at the studio for shipment to Flagstaff.

Countess Role

Lucile Watson will be seen in "Florian" as Countess Elizabeth.

Scandinavian, French Films Open Festival

"En Saga," "Mayerling" First of International Series at Little

As the first program of its second International Cinema Festival, the Little Theater is offering a Scandinavian film new to Washington and a French one that is an old friend. "En Saga," inspired by Jan Sibelius' tone poem of the same name, and "Mayerling," the Charles Boyer-Danielle Darrieux re-creation of the Hapsburg tragedy, opened yesterday to mark a bright beginning for the new festival.

"En Saga" is a noble representative of the very-much-in-the-news Scandinavia. A Danish production, photographed in Norway's Lapland, spoken in Swedish and with the music of Finland's great composer, the picture tells a universal story in a peculiarly localized setting. The new feature's most captivating characteristic, however, is its authenticity. The Arctic Circle snow, the rushing wolves, the bulky, wrap-around clothing and the distinctive atmosphere of the piece are memorably caught by a camera that was on the job for a year and a half.

Heredity Versus Environment

Finnmark, a Norwegian county within the Arctic Circle, is inhabited by the nomadic Laplanders and the town-dwelling, educated "Daros." Unknown to herself, Laila is by blood a "Daro," although she has been brought up as a Laplander. She is about to marry—and very light-heartedly, too—the heir of a wealthy Lap, when she meets and falls in love with the son of a town priest. How she solves the clash between her foster father and her lover's people makes an interesting answer to the heredity versus environment argument.

The pivotal role is handled by a lovely, vivacious Swedish stage and screen performer, Aino Taube, a name which time and deserving attention should make well known over here. Striking photography makes skiing more than a mere sport for exercise, and wolves become even more terrifying than they are at one's front door.

"Mayerling," that prize-winning and brilliantly directed romance of the Austrian Archduke Rudolph and the dancing Vetsera, needs little further attention here. The two stars were directed by Anatole Litvak in this French-speaking film and there is a musical background by Composer Arthur Honegger.

Both the films have English subtitles and will remain at the Litttle through Saturday evening. On Sunday "Modern Times," the Charlie Chaplin satire, and "Don Quixote," Feodor Chaliapin's adaptation of Cervantes' great character, will open to run through Tuesday.

RICHARD L. COE.

Atlas

"VARITIES OF 1940." Buddy Lewis, mimic and master of ceremonies, headlines the stage revue opening at the Northeast theater on Sunday afternoon. Mimi Stewart, radio vocalist, Gleason and Allen swingsters; Jackie Young and Francene Joy, dancers, and Leon Brusiloff's music are the other attractions. The double feature screen program stars Fred MacMurray and Madeliene Carroll in "Honeymoon in Bali" and Roy Rogers in "Jeepers Creepers."

Long Time to Die

J. Farrell MacDonald, the veteran player, has set a new kind of a record. After sitting down in a chair on the "Untamed" set "to die" four weeks ago the shooting schedule was changed to another set. Last week MacDonald came back to complete the scene and finally "died."

Versatile Actor

John Howard, starring in "Disputed Passage," won top honors in college as a scholar, athlete and musician. He gained the coveted Phi Betta Kappa key in scholarship, won letters in football, track, boxing and basketball and earned his way by leading a dance orchestra.

Mary Haworth's Mail

Wretchedly Confused by Suitor's Pleadings, Girl No Longer Knows Right From Wrong; What to Do?

DEAR MARY HAWORTH: I have been going with a boy over a year and I know he is the boy I want to marry. He says he loves me, but he says also that I am not sincere. He wants me to prove that I love him and I don't want to—not in the way he asks—because, while I love him enough to marry him, he is asking me to give him something which I haven't any right to give until I am married. Or have I? He says no ceremony could make us love each other more, merely by saying a few words over us.

I am so bewildered. I love him so much, but he is getting angry with me now whenever the subject comes up . . . He says it's my old-fashioned notions which I learned from my grandmother and that it's time I unlearned some of them and was more modern. I asked him, "Suppose I were disgraced?" But he says there are many persons eager and willing to help girls who get in trouble, and besides, nobody really thinks anything of it nowadays when a girl does such things, if she really loves the man.

He has given me a week to decide whether I'll "prove" my love for him. Couldn't you possibly say something that would not only help me, but something that would convince him that no man has a right to ask such things of the girl he loves? I'm beginning to think he is selfish, but when I am with him and he pleads, I get terribly upset and right seems wrong and wrong seems right. If I must give him up, how can I forget him? I'm so true to people I love that I don't know how to forget him.

Top Sergeant's Vocabulary In Order Here

DEAR T. B. A.: The proverbially sulphuric vocabulary of a top sergeant—which I am not at liberty to employ here, even if I were schooled in it— would be necessary for describing with blistering accuracy, this white-livered rascal who is trying to seduce you. Notice how suavely he sidesteps even the implication of a promise to stand by you in case of trouble, supposing you yield to his wolfish persuasions!

Whom does he say will take care of you, in the event that you find yourself in the cruel predicament of illegitimate pregnancy as a result of satisfying his thievish demands? Himself? Ah, no. Don't look to him for help. If and when that day comes, put your pride in your pocket and weep for shame on your mother's breast; or take your problem to the social agencies; or write to columns such as this, in the hope that some altruistically minded individual will come to the rescue and try to put together the broken pieces of the life he has wrecked!

What is he but an emotional "con" man, who would chisel you out of all the holdings in your treasury of self respect? He is the sort of man who has been described in the vernacular as being so low that he could walk on stilts under a snake's belly. He is as much—perhaps more—a criminal in his intentions toward your spirit and your person as any robber who makes a haul at the point of a gun.

In view of the outrageous demands he is making on you, unscrupulously turning your very love for him into a weapon of destruction, there is ludicrous pathos in your wistful statment that you are "beginning to think he is selfish!" And he calls you insincere! Yet there you have the measure of the two personalities. Some philosopher has had the wit to observe that we impute to others the things of which we ourselves are capable. You are slow to discern the shocking enormity of his selfishness because you are essentially so generous, so inclined to believe only the best of your fellows. And he is quick to cry "insincere," because of his primarily untrustworthy character.

How are you going to forget him? I should think it would be comparatively easy, if you can conjure—and keep—before your mind, a picture of what your fate would be, if you were to submit to his will. At best, you could become, for a time, his creature; meekly subordinate to his merciless lust. And when it had been fully gratified, you would find yourself in the discard, just one more conquest chalked up by an aimlessly careering "sexual athlete," (as one writer has called the man who is persistently "on the make.")

At worst, you would have a fatherless child, born under the most humiliating and demoralizing of circumstances; and, as I heard an authority in such matters say yesterday, society has as yet found no happy solution for this particular problem. When the girl relinquishes her child, usually all sorts of unanswerable speculations continue to gnaw at her heart throughout life. When she keeps it, even if she later marries and her husband accepts it freely as his foster-child, she is anxiously and involuntarily on the defensive against anticipated slights of the youngster.

These alternative pictures of the virtually inescapable "fade out" of your romance (supposing you oblige the man) are none too pretty, are they? But you've got to face them, since they're waiting for you, just over the hilltop of that "testimonial surrender" which he is soliciting. My advice to you is to give this smallfry bounder the boot while your soul is still in your own keeping. He'll be off to other pastures eventually any way; and to give him what he asks, in the meantime, would be, indeed, to cast pearls before swine.

M. H.

Miss Haworth will be glad to help you in solving your problems. Write her in care of The Post Woman's Page.

Now It's Her "Smoking Jacket"

Mannish Bob Out, Asserts Miss Arden

Beauty Expert Urges Older Woman to Look Her Best Always

By Marshall Adams,
The Post Fashion Editor.

"WHETHER the war continues abroad or sweeps over here, there will never be a de-feminizing effect upon women and their beauty habits or a return to the mannish bobs of the roaring twenties."

Marshall Adams

Thus thumbs were turned down orally on the recently conjectured change to masculine fashions by no less a person than Elizabeth Arden, widely known beauty expert. While racing back and forth between Bowie, Warenton and New York this week end, the attractive founder of a chain of beauty salons found time to make a request of the older woman. Here it is:

"At this moment the older woman of intelligence and charm can do a great deal to relieve war-scare tension in her own home and community. She can do it by always looking her best, by keeping her waistline to a doctor's minimum, and by seeing to it that hair, nails, skin and make-up are as perfect and truly her own as when she was 16 and took those things for granted. By looking like the well-groomed, well-informed person she is, and playing up to her responsibility as a citizen and mother or wife, she can ease the strain which an otherwise neglected, sloppy figure and coiffure might induce. Every woman in the world today owes it to herself to stalemate approaching events by appearing as desirably feminine as her means and time will permit."

She Proves Her Point

A magnetic example of this theory is Miss Arden herself, who, despite having pioneered the beauty industry over 20 years ago, looks smart and fresh as one of her own ads. Impeccably tailored in a spruce red tweed suit and felt hat, spiked with a winter-green blouse and hat sash, Miss Arden epitomized the clear thinking woman to whom she was appealing. Her complexion was especially soft and glowing yet with scarcely a visible trace of make-up.

Discussing make-up, Miss Arden explained that the kind she used and prophesied for the future was of a natural, personal nature.

She Looks at the Future

"The soft, true tints in complexion coloring are the thing of the future," she asserted, "and the prettier and more feminine the flexible new cosmetics apply themselves to the individual, the better, since pretty, natural looking women are a moral support during states of international unrest." The coiffure, too. Miss Arden prophesied as leaning more toward natural, rather sweet and lovely contours. "Up, off the face and down in back, with curls and a peruke or a chignon," was her prediction.

When asked about the future of the American figure, if erratic designers put women back in blouses, ties and skirts, Miss Arden laughed at the very idea of women forsaking the present hour glass figure. The slender authority, who looks 5 feet 5 rather than her 5 feet 2 due to her erect carriage, stated that her operatives over the world are reporting renewed interest in hour-glass curves. They also report a return to the robe de-intorior and the tea gown in gentle colors and soft fabrics.

A Small Tea

"Now I'm only going to have a few people in to meet Grace. I think those large teas are simply disgraceful."

"So do I! It's much smarter to have intimate little gatherings. Who's on your list?"

"Just a few of Grace's old friends . . . and then I thought I'd have a few people that I just can't put off doing something for any longer . . . like Louise Leech and Marie Chumley——"

"If you have Marie Chumley, you'll have to have Barbara Gadd. They're always together."

"That's so . . . Besides, I owe Barbara a luncheon. Oh, and say! Barbara's mother and sister are visiting her! Well, that's absolutely the limit of those I'm going to invite. I'm going to keep this thing small if it kills me.

"What are you doing about the girls in the bridge club?"

"I'm simply not having them—except Maudie Tinkle. I thought I'd ask her not to say anything about it to the others."

"If you have Maudie, you might as well buy time on the radio and broadcast it. Why do you have to have her?"

"Oh, she knows some marvelous little woman who makes perfectly darling appetizers . . . We-ll anyway, I guess I might as well have the girls in the bridge club. Then I wouldn't have to entertain the club till spring."

"Who else are you having?"

"Well, I thought it would be a good idea to invite the wife of George's boss. Still . . . that might look as if we were running after her . . . I suppose I could invite the wives of all the executives. That would only make eight more."

"Are you having Margie Duller?"

"I am NOT. It makes me yawn to think of her."

"They say he's going to get that big appointment on the Public Nuisance Commission."

"We-ll, of course Margie's always been nice to me, and she is sort of sweet. I really ought to have her."

"Then you'll have to have all that crowd—Estelle Crash and Jane Newcome and Anne Clymer . . ."

"I suppose so. Well, I can take care of a few more—by taking out the sofa. But I won't have a single other one!

"Who's pouring?"

Mrs. Bigsbee, for one, and then Marcia Burlap—she's always so decorative——"

"If you have Mrs. Bigsbee, you'll have to invite that Mrs. Puffer. She's leading that other faction in the Amazons."

"That's right. And she takes up so much room. And of course if I have Marcia, I'll have to invite Sylvia Sweet—to show I'm not paying any attention to that gossip about Marcia and Sylvia's husband . . . Oh, and Sylvia knows the Wattles from home!"

"If you have the Wattles, you'll have to have the Midgets and the Tooners."

"Yes, and Nettie Pouch. And she never goes anywhere without her mother."

"And there's Ethel Bing and her sister."

"And Nora Miffin and her aunt! Well, they're all rather small. And I could take out the piano, I guess. But positively not another name goes on this list!"

"Say! What are you doing about Sadie and Sally Juniper? Grace went to school with them."

"I don't believe they'll ever find out about this."

"You'll have to keep it out of the paper, then."

"Ye-es . . . Only those newspaper people always get things some way. I just wish they'd never print my name again . . . However . . . it might be nice for Grace to have the clippings to take home . . . I guess I'll have the Junipers."

"Then you'll have to have all the rest of that Spoofem alumnae crowd."

"That's so. We-ll, I suppose I really owe them an entertainment. And I could take out all the bookcases.

"I don't suppose you've asked Nancy Steppit, have you?"

"No, indeed! There's too much talk about her."

"Still—she can do a lot of harm if she gets mad at you."

"Well, if I ask her I'll have to ask all that crowd—Bess Wilder and Dot Pacer and Leona Trott—and I just think a person ought to take a moral stand somewhere . . . Besides there won't be standing room."

"Still, of course their husbands have a lot of influence."

Ye-es, and I do have to think of George's business connections. Say, you know what I believe I'll do! I believe I'll just hire one of the hotel ballrooms—and call in a catered . . . and a decorator . . and ask everybody . . . and get it all over at once."

Fast Dyes Now Used On New Bedspreads

Of interest to laundry-wise housekeepers are new designs in chenille-tufted and candlewick bedspreads, which not only mark a departure from the usual run of patterns but are dyed with vat colors, the fastest dyes known to modern science.

Bedspreads that are merely dip-dyed are likely to fade when washed. The vat-dyed spreads, however, are thoroughly washable. The cloth and the yarn for the tufting are dyed separately, permitting the added advantage of combinations of two or more colors, which is not possible with dip-dyed spreads.

Don't Talk About Your Diet to Men, Advises Iso Briselii, Violinist; Lists Feminine Foibles That Annoy His Sex

WOMEN go along day in and day out doing the things men dislike most and then wonder why they are not more beloved. One reason might be that nobody tells us . . . But then, who would dare?

Well, Iso Briselli, the globe-trotting violinist, deserves this week's special award for bravery. Under questioning that may have been a bit ruthless he has broken down and listed a few of the feminine foibles that rile a man to the point of distraction—and we wouldn't be surprised if he were speaking for the entire masculine population!

Here's the list: Fussy clothes, to many gewgaws, flagrant make-up, noisiness, and the absence of mystery. A man wants a little mystery in his life, opines our mind speaker, and it is up to the right woman to furnish this element.

Be Mysterious About Diet

Whatever else you do, be mysterious about your diet and exercise! Certainly you are expected to be attractively slim, but no man wants to hear the mechanics of how it is done. As Mr. Briselli says, "When a man takes his heart interest out to lunch at the nicest restaurant he knows, he does not enjoy hearing the details of her diet. He might as well take her around to the pet shop for some birdseed!"

And, another thing, women should be able to take their exercise without proclaiming it from the housetops. The average person has to take calisthenics to keep in condition and Mr. Briselli maintains that it is nothing out of the ordinary. In fairness to him, let me tell you that he adheres so strictly to his rule of "exercising and not talking about it" that someone else had to divulge his program.

Most of the exercises he does for 30 minutes every morning are so strenuous that you should not attempt them. There is one respiratory exercise, however, which would be excellent for you. It is done with a "stretcher"—an exercise gadget made of several strands of strong elastic with handles at either end. This affords unusually good exercise for arms, shoulders chest and back—all sadly neglected muscles.

Walk on All Fours

His favorite exercise for the trunk muscles (waist and abdominal girdle) is to get down on the floor on all fours backward! Don't try it! You'll get marvelous results simply by walking about the floor on all fours in the conventional manner—of course, with the tummy muscles retracted.

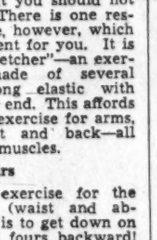
If you want graceful hands, here is an ingenious exercise: Place bottle corks in the crotches of the fingers. Then move the fingers separately to work the corks up to fingertips and back to the crotches.

A Woman's New York

By Alice Hughes

New York, Dec. 6.

WHAT A TEN DAYS for the girls this has been! Never seed the like in my born days! Young Janie Bryan—or O'Brien to her pa and ma—has been giving us the Celtic sparkle around town, as she holds forth on the Music Hall screen with Paul Muni in "We Are Not Alone." Jane takes the new fame seriously, but not big. I think she can act better than any of the Hollywood hopefuls.



Alice Hughes

But she's unaffected by all the hoop-la. She has a Helen Hayes sort of simplicity. And still says "Jeepers!" with awe as a mess of crepes suzette or midget pancakes goes up in a blaze of fire. Some kid, this one.

Then Dick Knight did his famous cartwheels in the bar of the apera on the opening night, and after he had been quietly escorted into the cold air, he told reporters he had been intoxicated by the singing of Elizabeth Rethberg.

The next thing we behold was the great bejeweled fashion show at the Ritz, with Brenda Frazier wearing the great Jonker Diamond, weighing over 125 carats, and price-tagged at a million. Dollars, not roubles, either. Her sister post-debs showed off a few odd rubies and other diamonds, and there were nearly as many thick-necked cops on hand to guard the frippery as there were bug-eyed ladies at the luncheon tables. Such imperial times!

And then Aunt Ethel Barrymore, playing a spooky crone of a mere 97 years in "Farm of Three Echoes," as against the 100-year-old Gran of last season's "Whiteoaks." But this new one is a fat, tricky, showy part . . . filled with all her cute trouper stunts. All the Barrymores pick those these days, now that Ethel, Lionel and Jack are all character stars and no longer whirlwinds of romance. So you can see we've had just a whooping time of it, here lately!

GIRL ABOUT TOWN—The town has suddenly gone mad for the new, wild and woolly Marlene Dietrich as seen in "Destry Rides Again" . . . just as the citizens jammed the Radio City Music Hall for three astonding weeks to see the 1939 Garbo in "Ninotchka." By golly—what a treat it has been to see those two beautiful but frozen females suddenly thaw out, come to life, and act living and rambunctious characters all over the screen! When girls like those two really go to work, they make some of the younger babes look just a little dim and futile . . .

Everyone has heard a lot about Mrs. Hortense Odlum, who took over the running of an upper Fifth avenue store a few years back and helped turn it into one of the town's wonders. Well, there's an equally interesting woman doing a big job downtown in the Fourteenth street belt. Her husband left Helen DeFreece a huge bazaar down there in the popular priced area. She'd never worked before, but she took over, and now she is its president, and doing a great job. She told me the other day that bringing up her three daughters is far tougher than operating a big department store. One wants to be an actress. No. 2 is studying voice, and the third, of high school age, is now passing through the radical measles stage.

Capital's Death Rate Cited In Attack on Health Program

By the Associated Press

Chicago, Dec. 6.—Senator Burke (Democrat), of Nebraska, contended tonight that the proposed national health program would entail a "staggering cost."

Discussing the pending Wagner Health bill, he told the Chicago Medical Society:

"Sponsors of the plan estimate that when it is in full operation there will be involved a total expenditure, Federal and State, of $85,000,000 annually. When the further recommendations of the 'technical committee' have been added to the program . . . the annual outlay required is estimated at the staggering total of more than $2,500,000,000."

Burke said he opposed the program because it would centralize control in Washington, "tend to destroy individual initiative," and impose a new burden on "an already depleted treasury."

The Senator asserted countries which had experimented with "socialized medicine" had health records "vastly inferior to ours" and added:

"Consider the District of Columbia. There we have a population in excess of 600,000 completely subject to the will of Federal Governors. If there is some alchemy in political control we ought to find health conditions in the district vastly superior to those in the States, where the medical profession has been up to this time free from the possibility of Federal domination. Yet exactly the opposite is true.

"The death rate from cancer, tuberculosis, diphtheria and the infant mortality rate are all far higher in the District of Columbia than the State average."

D. C. Woman Exonerated in Auto Fatality

Bus Driver Also Cleared; 79th Traffic Victim of Year Dies

Mrs. Flora Kirk, 35, of 2111 Huidekoper place northwest, was exonerated by a coroner's jury yesterday after an inquest into the death of her husband, John R. Kirk, who was killed May 16 when their automobile collided with a bus at Massachusetts avenue and Van Ness street northwest.

Daniel Murphy, 25, of Asbury

Daniel Murphy Mrs. John Kirk

Park, N. J., operator of the bus, which was loaded with school children, also was acquitted by the verdict.

Seventy-ninth Traffic Victim Dies

Athey was thrown to the pavement and suffered a severe head injury, police reported. A companion, Raymond Collins, 29, of 404 Second street northwest, escaped with cuts on his legs. Athey's death raised the District's traffic toll to 79, two less than the total on the same date last year.

Kirk, who was a deputy commissioner of Internal Revenue, died instantly in the accident last May, suffering a skull fracture and crushed chest in the head-on collision. The inquest was delayed until yesterday because of Mrs. Kirk's injuries.

Taking the stand in her own defense, Mrs. Kirk testified that she and her husband were driving east on Massachusetts avenue, and that she was looking for Van Ness street. Unfamiliar with the section and confused by street excavations, she stated, she swerved toward several temporary entrances into building sites, thinking them to be the street she was looking for.

Says Street Was Dark

The street was dark, she said and when she saw Van Ness street she turned toward it without seeing the bus.

"I've thought since then," she explained, "whether I became excited and gave it more gas rather than put on the brakes."

Mrs. Kirk testified in a quiet, steady tone. Several times before taking the stand she had wept and when the verdict was announced, she broke down.

Murphy stated that he was driving between 25 and 30 miles per hour when he noticed the Kirk machine being driven rather unsteadily. He pulled over as far as he could, he declared, and stopped. Neither he nor any of the children was injured.

An autopsy report prepared by Deputy Coroner Richard M. Rosenberg was read to the jury. It stated that a blood test indicated Kirk was intoxicated.

Two occupants escaped unscathed and two others were injured slightly when their car collided with another at New Hampshire avenue and Ingraham street northwest, overturned three times, landed on its wheels and ran into a parked automobile.

Drivers Unhurt

The injured were Miss Nellie G. Bulger, 56, of 1601 Argonne place northwest, who suffered shock and body injuries, and Harry Fulton, 55, of 1732 Lanier place northwest, who suffered multiple lacerations. Both were treated at Emergency Hospital.

The driver of the car was Ruth N. Jelly, 42, of Arlington, Va.; the other passenger was Marion Harvey, of College Park, Md. The driver of the other car, Thomas O. Mack, 20, of Laurel, Md., also was uninjured.

A two-car collision at First and Rhode Island avenue northwest resulted in knee injuries for William Allen, 63, of Green Lane, Pa., the driver of one car. He was treated at Freedmen's Hospital. His grandson, Cedric Allen, suffered cuts and bruises, was treated at Sibley Hospital and later transferred to Children's Hospital.

Court Indicates Refusal Of Fur Injunction

By the Associated Press

The Supreme Court indicated yesterday that it would dismiss litigation brought by the Fur Workers Union of the American Federation of Labor in an effort to enjoin members of the C. I. O. Fur Workers Union from picketing the store of H. Zirkin & Sons, of this city.

Chief Justice Hughes announced that the court did not desire to hear further argument after counsel for the federation affiliate had presented his side of the case. This procedure usually means that the case will be dismissed.

Ohio Doctors Fear for Health Because of Relief Shortage

Cleveland Commissioner Predicts Toll Will Be Exacted as City Moves to Get Funds Through Bonds to Meet Needs

By the Associated Press

Cleveland, Dec. 6.—Dr. Harold Knapp, Cleveland health commissioner, said tonight medical authorities are "fearing the results in the immedate future" of the relief-financing crisis harassing Cleveland and other Ohio cities

"We are concerned with the situation," Dr. Knapp said. "If you have undernourished or starved people you haven't good health. You may expect a toll to be exacted later."

InCleveland 46,000 persons are on "two-thirds" relief rations, while 12,000 others, recently cut off relief rolls, were dependent largely upon Federal assistance.

5,913 in Toledo

In Toledo, the council of social agencies reclared 5,913 persons needed care.

"There were many cases in actual want and acute need—where persons were starving," the council reported. "Many people were picking up scraps—scavenging."

Toledo today received State approval to issue $1,200,000 in bonds pledged against future collections of delinquent taxes. Mayor Burton said revenue from these bonds would be no more than sufficient to meet the relief deficit and to continue relief the remainder of the year.

The State nominally matches Ohio communities' relief expenditures dollar for dollar. It put up only 32 per cent of the total expended from July 1st to November 1, because expenditures ran higher than estimated by the legislature.

Cleveland, Toledo and several other cities' officials have beseeched Gov. Bricker to summon the legislature to supply new funds. Bricker contends the cities have adequate means to meet their needs.

Bricker "In a Spot"

The Cleveland News, in an article today analyzing widespread interest in the situation, said Gov. Bricker "is in a spot."

Asserting he is "regarded as a serious challenger for the Republican nomination" for President, it said:

"His proudest achievement as governor is his record for economy. To the extent that he yields to Cleveland he reduces his State savings. To the extent that he refuses to help Cleveland he lends ammunition to Democrats."

Farm Labor Denied Rights, Says Gov. Olson

Assails Big Employers And Urges President Name a Committee

By the Associated Press

San Francisco Dec. 6.—Asserting "civil liberties have been violated in California . . . beyond all question," Gov. Culbert L. Olson today asked Presidential appointment of "a committee on agricultural labor and inter-State migration."

The California executive submitted a 12,000-word statement to the Senate Civil Liberties sub-committee, which opened a hearing on industrialized farming and farm labor.

He criticized the associated farmers, leaders of which have been subpenaed before the committee, and attacked "organized farm groups . . . that . . . are opposed to . . . the principles of collective bargaining for agricultural labor."

He also said he was "serving notice" that "this (State) administration" was "prepared to go to any lengths, even to the point of calling out the National Guard and invoking martial law, to see that order is maintained and that the laws are equally and impartially enforced."

The sub-committee hearing, which recessed until December 13, was presided over by Senator La Follette (Progressive), of Wisconsin, chairman, assisted by Senator Thomas (Democrat), of Utah. Both asked many questions of two other persons who outlined California's agricultural picture in its relation to the Nation as a whole.

They were Henry H. Fowler, the sub-committee's chief counsel, who said this State had undergone agricultural turmoil "out of proportion" to the remainder of the country, and Prof. Paul S. Taylor, economist of the University of California, who said such a condition was due to the prevalence of large-scale "agricultural employers" in California.

Indicative of most of the charts which Fowler explained was one showing that while California had but a 4.4 per cent of the Nation's agricultural field workers, this staff provided 34.9 per cent and upward of the workers involved in strikes in the United States since 1933.

Faulkner Flies Here to Testify In Plagiarism Suit

William Faulkner, novelist, flew in from Oxford, Miss., last night to testify today in District Court for Twentieth Century-Fox Film Corporation, which is defending itself against a $1,000,000 plagiarism suit brought by Robert Sheets, a soldier.

FAULKNER

The movie company's lawyers who met Faulkner would not let him talk about the trial, but he was permitted to reveal: (1) He is completing a novel, which, in length, at least, will make "Gone With the Wind" seem like a brochure; (2) "It'll probably wind me up."

The author of "Sanctuary" and "Pylon," a smallish man with black mustache, said his latest book will be published in three volumes and have a Mississippi locale. Faulkner is a native of Mississippi and even ran a small town postoffice there 15 years ago.

He was met at Washington Airport by Fulton Brylawski and William Wolf, counsel for Twentieth Century-Fox Film Corporation.

First Lady Fetes Justices' Wives At Season's First Formal Luncheon

47 Attend Function in State Dining Room; Mrs. Charles E. Hughes and Mrs. William H. Taft Occupy Honor Positions With Mrs. Roosevelt

By Hope Ridings Miller

IN HONOR OF wives of the Supreme Court Justices, Mrs. Roosevelt entertained yesterday at her first formal White House luncheon of the season. Forty-seven guests were in the company that sat at a long table in the State dining room. Chrysanthemums, stevia and maidenhair fern were featured decorations there, and pink roses and carnations sprouted from tall vases arranged in the Blue Room, where guests were received.

HOPE R. MILLER

The routine of White House parties of this type rarely varies. Shortly after guests arrive and dispose of their wraps just inside the door, they are given cards charting their places at the table. Then each one is escorted into the Blue Room and to her niche in the circle that stands awaiting the arrival of Mrs. Roosevelt.

After she comes in and walks around the circle to greet each guest, the company goes into the dining room. Approximately 45 minutes later, the doors to the Red Room are opened and guests go there for coffee, while Mrs. Roosevelt moves from group to group, chatting a few minutes with each person present. When she takes her stand at the door of the Red Room, it is a signal that the party is over, and guests then speedily take their departure.

Many Officials' Wives Among Those Present

Mrs. Harold D. Smith, Mrs. Ronald Ransom, Mrs. Henry F. Grady, Mrs. Herbert E. Gaston, Mrs. O. John Rogge and Mrs. Samuel O. Clark, jr., and Mrs. Francis M. Shea were also high on the list of guests. Still others there were Mrs. Chester W. Nimitz, Mrs. Robert L. Ghormley, Mrs. Lorenzo D. Gasser, Mrs. John K. McKee, Mrs. James L. Fly, Mrs. Robert W. Bruere, Mrs. James L. Houghteling, Mrs. Harry Baxter Miss Katherine C. Blackburn, Miss Mabel T. Boardman, Mrs. David Tucker Brown.

Also in the company were Miss Dorothea Campbell, Miss Beatrice Cabb, Mrs. George H. Dern, Mrs. Gilbert M. Hitchcock, Mrs. Jeanne Bankhead Hoyt, Mrs. Howard Ker, Mrs. Florence S. Kerr, Mrs. Norman Littell Mrs. James A. Logan, Mrs. Adolph C. Miller, Miss Jennie M. Moore, Miss Mary patten, Mrs. Mahlon Pitney, Mrs. Sanford L. Rariden, Mrs. Daniel C. Roper, Mrs. Edmund W. Starling, Mrs. Howard S. Wilkinson, Miss Harriet Winslow, Miss Malvina C. Thompson and Mrs. James M. Helm.

While that party was under way at the White House, a much younger set was enjoying the buffet luncheon given by Mrs. Barge Llewellyn Hartz and her daughter, Janet Lawler Hartz, in honor of two debutantes of the season, Miss Rosalyn Louise Buchanan, daughter of Mr. and Mrs. J. Wesley Buchanan, and Miss Patricia Uline Hill, daughter of Mrs. Uline Hill.

Hartz Party Draws Two Dozen Debs

The event took place at the Hartz home on Edgemoor lane and drew a sizable number of debs, sub-debs and their contemporaries. Miss Hartz was trimly turned out in a pale blue crepe frock, made on simple lines. Miss Hill, who came over from Goucher College especially for the event, was a stunning figure in a black and white ensemble, featuring a white fringed jacket, and a matching turban, accented with a blue ornament to match her beads. Miss Buchanan had chosen a black frock, embroidered in gold, and a smart black turban.

Mrs. Hartz was trimly turned out in black, and her elder daughter, Mrs. Hartz Kendall, also wore a becoming black frock, which was trimmed in dusty rose. Assisting Mrs. Hartz were Senora de Munilla, wife of the Cuban Military Attache; Mme. Orlicz Dreszer, Mrs. Buchanan, Mrs. Hill, Mrs. Abner Drury, whose taupe hat, with its towering taupe and white plume and its red band, was one of the snappiest I have seen this season; Mrs. William Shearer, Mrs. Neitah King, Mrs. McKenzie Davison and Mrs. E. G. Grey.

Guests from the deb and subdeb sets included Miss Yolanda Alfaro, Miss Edith Pearson, Miss Patricia Prochnik, Miss Marilynn Himes, Miss Achsah Dorsey, Miss Ellen Hewes Flowerree, Miss Molly Stonestreet, Miss Dorothy Chandler, Miss May Byrne Simpson, Miss Edith Hood, Miss Anne Sperry, Miss Margaret Gordon, Miss Berenice Merchant, Miss Nancy Davis, Miss Nancy Weller, Miss Virginia Pennington, Miss Martha Belle Moore, Miss Patsy Kyle, Miss Betty Ann Swagart, Miss Nancy Lawrence and Miss Mary Norris.

Mrs. Blackwood Visits Capital

In town on a sightseeing tour are Mrs. Paul Blackwood, of Los Angeles, and her daughter, Miss Hope Blackwood.

Under the wing of former Representative and Mrs. Maurice Thatcher the two have been "doing" the town. Unless Mr. Blackwood decides to come East and join his family they will leave for the West Coast the end of next week.

Mrs. Blackwood and her daughter have but recently returned to the United States from a trip abroad. They traveled in Europe for nearly a year. The two sailed from France shortly after war was declared. They spent several months in St. Moritz, Switzerland, where Miss Blackwood, an excellent skier, enjoyed the snow sports. While in England Miss Blackwood studied at Oxford taking a special lecture course.

Originally from Louisville, Ky., the Blackwoods are old friends of Mr. and Mrs. Thatcher. Mr. Blackwood, now a prominent lawyer in Southern Calfiornia, was at one time associated with Mr. Thatcher in pratice of law in Louisville.

L. G. Caldwell to Give 'Cocktails and /Or Tea'

Several members of Capital society were startled to receive in the mail yesterday a large, typewritten piece of paper which looked like a summons to court. However, on closer examination, the missive turned out to be an amusing invitation from Louis G. Caldwell, who had couched it in legal language, to a party on Sunday, December 17, in honor of Philip J. Hennessey, jr., newly elected president of the Federal Communications Bar Association, and Mrs. Hennessey.

"In the Matter of Philip J. Hennessey, jr., et uxor," reads the invitation, "you are ordered to show up at 200 Cleveland avenue from 5 p. m. until the second hour after sunset. Purpose: To explore Mr. Hennessey's legal, technical and other qualifications for his special temporary experimental modification of status. Social and economic factors: cocktails and/or tea."

Brazil Envoy's Wife Plans to Christen Ship

Senhora de Martins To Break Champagne Bottle in Baltimore

A party of diplomatic and official notables will journey to Baltimore a week from Saturday for the christening of the new passenger ship, Del Brazil, of the Delta Line.

As the liner will ply between New Orleans and the east coast of South America, Senhora de Martins, wife of the Brazilian Ambassador, has been chosen to break the bottle of champagne across the prow. Rear Admiral Emory S. Land, chairman of the Maritime Commission; Mrs. Land, and Mr. and Mrs. Creighton Peet will also attend the ceremonies. Officials of the Mississippi Shipping Co. are giving a big luncheon at the Belvedere Hotel in Baltimore that same day.

The name of the boat ("Del" stands for Delta) was suggested by no less a personage than President Vargas of Brazil, when the manager of the shipping company approached him in a quandary on a visit to South America last winter.

Another prospective ship christener of interest to Washington is Mrs. Max Truitt, who will break a bottle over the cargo boat, Flying Fish, on Friday, December 15, in New York. The boat, which has been built by the Maritime Commission, will ply between bere and Australia. Mrs. Truitt is the daughter of Senator and Mrs. Alben Barkley and wife of one of the Maritime Commissioners.

Dr. Huxley Listens More Than He Talks As Guest of Honor at Straights' Party

GUESTS WHO had nervously polished up on their knowledge of the atom preparatory to meeting Dr. Julian Huxley at the cocktail party given for him yesterday afternoon by Mr. and Mrs. Michael Straight found him one of the most approachable and friendly people to visit Washington in a long time. Washington intellectuals and some among the not so intellectuals were among those who motored out to the Straights' home in Alexandria.

"But Dr. Huxley hasn't had a chance to say anything," said one of the guests who had been waiting around for words of wisdom from the distinguished British scientist. "Everybody is telling hm things."

THE HOST knew Dr. Huxley in England, where Mr. Straight, who is the son of Willard Straight, founder of the New Republic, made his home before coming to Washington to work for the Government. He is the brother of Novelist Aldous Huxley, who has been writing for the movies. He will leave Washington tonight for a lecture tour, during which he will discuss the subjects on which he is an internationally known authority. Dr. Huxley is very familiar with the United States, having made several trips from the East Coast to the West, and having at one time taught at Rice Institute in Texas. However, the only opinion we could worm out of the guest of honor was that he thought the best invention of the last decade was the collapsible suitcase, which handles like an accordion.

Mr. and Mrs. Straight have one of the most charming houses in Alexandria. Only half a block from the waterfront it was in the old days when this city was a port the home of a sea captain. The library is particularly charming, with part of the walls paneled and the rest painted a warm red color. A fire blazed away on the hearth in this room and the living room. The dining room, to which one descends several steps, has walls tinted a pale green and a long glass-topped table.

Mrs. Straight wore a green dress with a gold necklace. Pouring tea was Mrs. Donald Hiss, who, with Mrs. Joseph Cotton, has begun to take flying lessons at the airport in College Park, Md. Mrs Hiss wore a smart gray wool dres with matching coat, and a black postillion hat with a veil trimmed in dark red to match her pocketbook.

OTHERS SEEN here and there were Justice and Mrs. Hugo Black, the latter in bright red with a matching hat; Oscar Chapman, Assistant Secretary of the Interior; Lowell Mellett, Mr. and Mrs. Benjamin Thoron, Dr. Harold Moulton, of Brookings Institute, with Mrs. Moulton; Dr. William Mann, director of the Zoo, and William Coyle, with his attractive fiancee. They will be married on New Year's Day.

Also Mrs. Clifford J. Durr, Mr. and Mrs. James Rowe, the latter wearing a bright red coat trimmed with Persian lamb; Mrs. J. P. Summerscale, Mrs. Frederick Livesey and many others.

Mr. and Mrs. Straight are great friends of the young and original Edmund Romillys, who are touring the country after a stay in Washington. Mr. Romilly is a nephew of Winston Churchill and his wife is a daughter of Lord Redesdale. They are traveling about doing odd jobs while they see the country, and before they left the Straights gave them letters of recommendation as maid and butler.

Mr. and Mrs. Woodson Houghton entertained at a second dinner this week last evening at their home on Eighteenth street. The dinner was one of a series.

The guests included Dr. and Mrs. B. Lauriston Hardin, of Georgetown; the Misses Harian and Elizabeth Shouse, Mr. and Mrs. Corcoran Thom jr.; Mr. and Mrs. James McMillan Gibson, Alden Hopkins, Miss Leila Knight, Laurence Bungardeanu and Eugen Teodorescu, of the Rumanian Legation.

MRS. Frances Parkinson Keyes has donated six scrapbooks to the exhibit which will be a feature of the tea to be given next Wednesday for Mary Beard, wife of Charles Beard, by the board of directors of the Washington unit of the World Center for Women's Archives.

Mrs. Keyes' Scot housekeeper has patiently assembled the fat volumes from clippings and letters which Mrs. Keyes has been sending her regularly for years every time she cleans out her desk. The contents include a letter from Mme. Chiang Kai-shek, and one from the Senator Keyes, in which he says to his wife, "If I speak on the League of Nations, what do you suggest as arguments?" Then there are several long letters from a great aunt of Mrs. Keyes, who was the first woman foreign correspondent in history. Among the great aunt's mementos is a notebook she kept as a child, which includes a dissertation on whether it is better to have a complete knowledge of philosophy or a pretty handwriting! This was written at 9.

Mrs. Beard has taken an active part in assembling what one day will be an important record of women's activities. Mrs. Keyes is contributing her scrapbook as an encouragement to other women who want to "do things."

Miss Mary Bourke, dean of cookery at the Lewis Hotel Training School, is scheduled to be the new president of the Soroptimist Club, succeeding Mrs. Jean Bennett, who has served for the past year. Snapping their fingers at superstition, the Soroptimists will hold their election, next Wednesday, December 13.

Although nominations may be made from the floor, it is customary for the slate prepared by the nominating committee to go through, including names indorsed by ten members and sent to the committee 20 days before the election.

Slated to serve with Miss Bourke are Mrs. Loraine Leese Good, first vice president; Mrs. Ella M. Hildebrand, second vice president; Miss Edna Connolly, recording secretary; Mrs. Cynthia Warner, corresponding secretary; Miss Emma Karst, treasurer. The two directors nominated are Miss Elva McNamara and Mrs. Mary Turner.

Mrs. Agnes Newman, past president of the club, heads the nominating committee, which also includes Mrs. Estelle Zirkin and Mrs. Zada Daniels.

Yesterday, at the weekly luncheon of the club, Mrs. Mary V. Judge was in charge of the program, devoted to the theater, and County Soroptimist Club; Miss bert Hartke, O. P., director of the department of drama at Catholic University. He discussed the contemporary theater and told something of "Yankee Doodle" which his group is now producing.

Among the guests at the luncheon were Mrs. Louis Noonan Miller, of the Little Theater; Mrs. Maurice Greet, Miss Anna Peck, president of the Montgomery County Soroptimist Club, Miss Katherine Winston, president of the Arlington Club, and Pearl Sharpe, Miss Gertrude Crocker and Miss Elizabeth Chambers, other members; Miss Ella Hauck, of the Baltimore Club, and Miss Margaret Buckley.

The Washington Soroptimists next week will have their Christmas party for a group of children whose families have received assistance from the Central Union Mission.

Last night, at a meeting at the Kenwood Golf and Country Club, the Montgomery County Soroptimists elected officers. These included Mrs. Mary Sowers, of Chevy Chase, president; Mrs. Florence Crossen, Silver Spring, vice president; Mrs. Helen Schaefer, Chevy Chase, secretary; Ruth Farnham, Wesley Heights, treasurer. They will be installed at a dinner meeting January 15 at the Kenwood Club.

Many of the authors and artists were present, the former including Mrs. Estella Aubrey Brown, whose book, "Around Two Worlds," has been published within the year.

Among the articles on sale at the fair were little owl paperweights (the owl is the Pen Women's insignia) made by the late Clara Hill, who was a sculptor member of the league. During her lifetime she made them each year for the fair and only recently a large box of them was found among her effects and given to the Pen Women for this season's sale. Stationery and cards with the league's insignia were also being sold yesterday.

Alternating at the tea table were Mrs. H. Lyle Campbell, Mrs. Ruth Norcross Hoxie, Miss Margaretta Campbell, Mrs. Elizabeth Tilton, Miss Alice Hutchins Drake and Mrs. William Walter Smith.

The fair will continue today and tomorrow.

Dr. Hugh S. Grant, former United States Minister to Albania, last night addressed the international relations group of the local branch of the American Association of University Women and showed his motion pictures for the first time since his return.

Among them were some in color of the celebration held two years ago on the twenty-fifth anniversary of Albania's independence. These included a view of the former monarch, King Zog, and his guard, as well as the crowds of women and children in their picturesque, gay costumes. Similar scenes were shown which Dr. Grant photographed at the time of the royal wedding.

He also showed pictures of the religious ceremonies, and of the dignitaries of the three faiths, Mohammedan, Orthodox and Catholic, whom he entertained at the legation. Visiting Washingtonians in the pictures taken at the legation were Miss Frances Youngblood and Mrs. Mary Malone Moore. Although Dr. Grant took pictures at the time of the Italian invasion, he has not yet had them developed.

Livingston, the president, advising her he had complied with the league's request that he fill the vacancies on the Montgomery Juvenile Court Committee. The State law provides for five members and, since June, there had been but one.

Gov. O'Conor has appointed Mrs. Raymond Clapper, of Chevy Chase and Mrs. Philip J. Fischer, of Bethesda, both league members; Dr. W. S. Murphy, of Rockville and Clark S. King, of Garrett Park. They will serve with Mrs. Milton H. Bancroft, of Sandy Spring, whose term of office held over.

He explained that, because of the importance of the work, he had given careful deliberation to the appointments. Mrs. P. G. B. Morehouse is chairman of child welfare for the Montgomery County Women Voters.

*X WASHINGTON: THURSDAY, DECEMBER 7, 1939 23

This Morning

With Shirley Povich

Cincinnati, Ohio, Dec. 6.—With his hawkish features and bristling crown, Judge Kenesaw Mountain Landis looks not unlike something out of an aviary, and yesterday they did try to clip the old bird's wings.

Minor league club owners who were finding the yoke of Landis' authority irksome, particularly his rulings against chain-store baseball, struck back. They passed legislation designed to obstruct the old gentleman's interference with their dealings. They voted four amendments which would give them a free hand in manipulating players owned by farm systems as the clubs liked.

POVICH

Landis wasn't here. He won't appear on the scene until tomorrow. The action of the minor leaguers smacks of nothing as much as the old nursery fable which notes that when the cat is away the mice will play. That is what happened. The minor leaguers became courageous in the judge's absence, but there is evidence that they have been legislating in a fool's paradise.

The judge has never liked farm system baseball and never will like it. It has expanded, but Landis has fought it at every turn. He has levied stiff fines against club owners who didn't hew to the line, and when he takes charge of the major league meetings starting tomorrow, he is apt to break loose. The judge, when aroused, is a potent package.

Chain Baseball Bad for Game

Landis has always made it plain how he stands on chain-store baseball. He thinks it is bad for the game, that it chokes off individual enterprise and permits the richer league clubs to acquire an unfair proportion of the available talent. He wants to see minor league clubs owned and operated by home-town interests as they were in baseball's formative years, not by agents of big league teams.

There's more than a chance that the old gentleman will crack down on the club owners at this session. Landis is the man who didn't shrink at fining the Standard Oil Co. $29,000,000 in a famous case several years ago and with his authority now flouted he has reason to be roiled.

Landis knows that behind the action of the minor leaguers at least two big league clubs stood in solid support if, indeed, they did not actually inspire the minors to take the shot at Landis. The judge knows that the clubs are the St. Louis Cardinals and the Brooklyn Dodgers and woe to that pair if Landis feels like taking drastic action. He could call off the World Series merely by saying it is a detriment to baseball.

In baseball, the old gentleman's authority is absolute. If you are a baseball man and the judge does not like you, he can give you the heave-ho. He can throw any club owner in baseball, and that includes the millionaires, out of the game forever. The other day, after the head of the White Sox farm system had certified a scout as a man of good character, Landis investigated and found the scout to be a notorious gambler and tossed both men out of baseball.

Ranks With Hitler in Point of Authority

As a dictator Landis ranks with Hitler and Stalin in point of authority. He demanded it that way when he consented to step down from the Federal bench and take over the job of baseball commissioner in 1921. In that year, baseball, rocked by the Black Sox scandal, laid itself at the feet of Judge Landis and begged that he administer the rules of the game.

The minors have their own commissioner, Judge Branham whom they are now paying $25,000 a year, but under the terms of Landis' contract, his is the last word in minor league baseball as well as major. The minors can pass amendments, but they must be to Landis' liking.

A year ago, Landis cracked down on the St. Louis Cardinals who were manipulating farm-system players in a manner that appeared unfair to the judge and he declared 101 players free agents. The other day he fined Brooklyn $500 for irregularities in handling a Class D league player. At this writing, the Detroit club is in such hot water with Landis that they are actually afraid to make certain deals because Landis might void them.

Outfielder Roy Cullenbine of the Tigers, was slated to go to the Browns in the ten-player deal last summer, but Landis ordered the Tigers to call off that part of that deal. He merely intimated that Cullenbine was a "hot" player and until the Tigers property rights to him were clarified, they could make no deal involving him.

Reports too well defined to be ignored are current here that starting tomorrow, when he takes charge, Landis will blow the lid off the farm system set up. Certain clubs have been able to circumvent Landis' rulings thus far but along the way they have made missteps. The judge may be in a mood to crack the whip and he knows exactly how far he can legally go, which is all the way. His unbreakable contract reads that he shall have the last word. They can clip Landis' wings only when he consents.

On the Line

With CONSIDINE

New York, Dec. 6.—Mayor F. H. LaGuardia today insured the artistic and financial success of one of the great high school football games of our time when he arranged for Seward Park High—the dead end zone kids from tough Hester street—to get permission to play Miami High in the Health Bowl game on Christmas Day.

CONSIDINE

The two crack teams will battle it out in Miami's Orange Bowl for the Lou Gehrig Trophy, donated by the Baseball Writers' Association of America. The entire proceeds of the game go into the fight against infantile paralysis. Fifty per cent of the proceeds come back to the national foundation in New York, for research, iron lungs, free clinics, pools and the like. The other 50 per cent remains in Florida to combat this worst of all possible diseases there.

Miami High, which presented the bid to Seward Park after looking the country over for a suitable colorful opponent, has an unbeaten record extending over two years and 17 games. It considered such fine teams as Garfield (N. J.) High, Baltimore (Md.) City College, East High of Souix City, Iowa, Poughkeepise (N. Y.) High, Lawrence High of Long Island, Billings (Mont.) High, Brockton (Mass.) High, Casper (Wyo.) High, and Mount Michael's, crack Westchester County, N. Y., school.

Seward Park Has Movie Scenario Team

Up until noon today it appeared that a New York State ruling prohibited post-season games would eliminate Seward Park as the guest team. Indeed, at the moment the mayor's okay arrived, Coach Jerry Warshower and school officials had called the dead end zone kids together to tell them that nothing could be done about accepting the bid. The kids couldn't believe it at first, then went whooping through the halls of the old school which once housed Eddie Cantor, Sid Terris and half the other celebrities who came up from Al Smith's part of town.

Seward Park has one of those movie scenario teams. Most of its students are up from the sidewalks of the teeming lower East Side. Children sing bass in their kindergarten classes down there, but a couple generations of comprehensive sports education has made these normally tough little eggs into as fine a crop of sportsmen as one could find. This year they had some touchdowns called back on them that would have had a team of Jobs trying to slug the officials. But they took these setbacks without a word of complaint.

Griff Offers Travis to Browns for McQuinn

Jim Wasdell Also Involved In Big Deal

Local Club Owner Hopes Legislation Will Keep Yanks Out of Bidding

By Shirley Povich.

A Staff Correspondent

Cincinnati, Ohio, Dec. 6.—Washington's quest for a first baseman widened to two fronts today when Clark Griffith opened negotiations with the St. Louis Browns pending developments with the Detroit Tigers.

George McQuinn, talented first sacker of the St. Louis club, is the new objective of the Nats' owner and Manager Bucky Harris.

Stalking Owner Barnes of the Browns in their hotel lobby today, Griffith invited Barnes to his suite for a long conference and, on emerging, admitted that he had made the Browns an offer for McQuinn.

"I think, though," said Griffith, "we are bidding against the Yankees. The Browns are willing to trade McQuinn if they get the right sort of offer."

Late tonight it was learned that the Yankees had submitted an attractive proposal to the Browns in an attempt to acquire McQuinn. The New York Club has offered the Browns First Baseman Babe Dahlgren, Outfielder Tommy Henrich and Shortstop Rizzuto in the deal. Rizzuto was the star of the Kansas City infield last season.

Griffith did not disclose the details of his offer to the St. Louis club but he said he would go high for McQuinn who batted .316 last season and was rated the best first baseman in the American League coincident with Hank Greenberg's slump.

It was learned, however, that Griffith's first offer to the St. Louis club provided for the shipment of Shortstop Cecil Travis and First Baseman Jimmy Wasdell to the Browns. Wasdell, last year with Minneapolis, is still the property of the Nats.

His willingness to part with Travis, his chief trading unit, is an index to the high regard the Nats' owner holds for McQuinn, the Ballston, Va., lad who became an outstanding star with the Browns after being released by the Yankees. A smooth fielder, McQuinn is a left-handed distance hitter and has been a consistent slugger for the Browns.

With the Yankees in the bidding for McQuinn, the Nats would appear to be hoplessly outbid, but Griffith is not entering the negotiations empty-handed.

In addition to offering a recognized star in Travis, Griffith hopes to stay any bid for McQuinn by the Yankees by introducing legislation at the American League meeting tomorrow.

Griffith will go into the meeting to offer for adoption a rule which would forbid the championship American League team to acquire a player from another league team by trade or purchase as long as the team is champion. Only waiver deals would be exempted.

It is Griffith's plan for balancing the league and preventing a recurrence of runaway races such as the

Cambria Tangles With Landis—Cost, $1,000

Cincinnati, Ohio, Dec. 6.—Joe Cambria, owner of several minor league clubs and on the Washington team's pay roll as a scout, today again fell afoul of Baseball Commissioner Landis and was fined $1,000.

Cambria, who at various times has incurred the wrath of Landis' office, was accused of irregularities in signing Pitcher William Donovan for his Salisbury, Md., club. On the charge that he signed Donovan to a blank contract which did not stipulate the team he would pitch for, Cambria was fined $500. On the charge that he inserted a fictitious date in registering Donovan's contract, Cambria was fined an additional $500.

Georgetown University's undefeated but once-tied gridmen couldn't decide on a single captain yesterday at a meeting in the Old North Building, so they elected four. As a sportsmanlike gesture Joe Mellendeck (signing ball), star of 1938 who was unable to compete this season due to a knee injury, was included among the cocaptains. Active players honored were Francis "Reds" Daly, Frank Meglen and Myron Darmohray. (Story on Page 24)

By the United Press.

New York, Dec. 6.—Gene Mako, of Los Angeles, and Wayne Sabin, of Portland, Oreg., former Davis Cup squad members, have been suspended from amateur tennis competition because of alleged violations of amateur regulations, the U. S. Lawn Tennis Association announced today.

MAKO

Mako and Sabin were declared ineligible on November 29 by joint action of the association's amateur rule committee and President Holcombe Ward, of the U. S. L. T. A.

Both were accused of violating two regulations: (1) Having received living and other expenses from tennis organizations for more than the maximum period of eight weeks during the year 1939, and (2) having received traveling expenses in excess of amounts as approved by the association.

Louis J. Carruthers, chairman of the amateur rule committee, said that Mako and Sabin were suspended after the committee had investigated expense reports turned in by clubs at which both players

Sports Editor:

It has been brought to my attention that some one reported me as saying that I did not agree with Bill Halloran in his decision last Sunday.

I never discussed the decision with anyone. The rules of both the National League and Eastern Intercollegiate Association prohibits any interviews by the officials in game in which they have worked. I, therefore, never mentioned to anyone that I did not agree with Bill Halloran.

In addition, as umpire of the Giants-Redskins game, I was in no position to judge the kick. Therefore, I could not have disagreed with him had the rule not restricted officials from granting interviews.

Please correct the impression that I in any way or manner attempted to give any external signs or utter any words of mouth that I did not agree with the decision. In this way you will save me a lot of embarrassment with my brother officials and the football public in general.

Halloran is a very fine official. He is one of the most upright officials in the entire sporting world. I would not want anyone to feel that I in any way attempted to besmirch his good name. After all, the greatest possession we can acquire in this world is a good name. I would not want anyone to feel that I would in anyway libel a brother official. I feel certain that when Bill Halloran gave his decision that he was prompted by the finest motives. All decisions of the kind are difficult to make. We must use our best judgment and a clear conscience in making same.

The inclosed letter was drafted prior to your request for opinions regarding the Redskin-Giant game, on Sunday, December 3. I thought you might be interested in reading it:

"Hon. Carl Storck, President,

Dayton, Ohio.
My dear President:

While I have not played football for many years, I have been in very close contact with college football for 30 years, and I have not missed a professional home game during the last three years, paying for from two to six tickets per game.

I am especially interested in place and drop kicks and on all occasions when attempts at either are made I watch nothing except the ball.

On Sunday, December 3, 1939, I attended the Redskin-Giant game, and I was in a position to observe the goal posts when Washington attempted a field goal near the end of the fourth quarter. I could also see the ball, with a view almost parallel with the flight of the ball and nearly

G. U. Cagemen Beat Terror Five, 52-34

Georgetown University recuperated sufficiently from a defeat in its first start of the season to turn back Western Maryland 52-34, last night before 1,500 at Tech High gym.

George Pajak, speedy forward, led the attack with four field goals and a pair of free shots for ten points, but before the contest was over Al Lujack Irving Rizzi, Jim Giebel and Russ Miller had come within a few points of matching his mark.

In launching their season with the Hoya cagemen, the Green Terrors of Western Maryland had but one real threat—the brilliant and almost unerring aim of Irving Biasi, a stocky guard. Biasi scored all but three of the 15 points Western Maryland accounted for in the first half, finally winding up with

Rogell for Bartell Deal Announced

Cincinnati, Dec. 6 (AP).—Officials of the Detroit Tigers announced tonight that they had traded Shortstop Bill Rogell to the Chicago Cubs, even up, for Shortstop Dick Bartell.

Both players are veterans. Bartell hit .241 for the Cubs in 107 games last season. Rogell clouted .225 in 71 games. Bartell was a much higher salaried player than Rogell, which possibly accounted for the fact that he was waived out of the National League.

Missouri U. Accepts Bid To Orange Bowl

Big Six Champions Play Georgia Tech in Miami New Year's Day

By the United Press.

Miami, Fla., Dec. 6.—To the surprise of no one, it was announced officially tonight that Missouri and Georgia Tech would be the principals in the Orange Bowl football game here New Year's Day.

C. F. (Jack) Baldwin, bowl committee chairman, confirmed what had been an open secret for some time when he announced Missouri, Big Six champions, had accepted a bid to meet Tech, holder of a one-third share in the Southeastern Conference title, here January 1.

Baldwin Makes Announcement

Baldwin made the anticipated announcement after speaking to Missouri athletic officials by telephone. Missouri had been regarded as a sure bet to play in the Orange Bowl for some time, and the only surprise occasioned was in delay of the official announcement.

Georgia Tech accepted an invitation to play here shortly after closing its season with a 13-to-0 triumph over Georgia last Saturday.

The Orange Bowl will bring Big Six and Southeastern Conference champions together for the second straight year when Missouri and Georgia Tech clash. Tennessee trounced Oklahoma, 17 to 0, last New Year's Day.

Although Missouri and Tech will not come here with the unbeaten records that Tennessee and Oklahoma had, they are expected to put on a better show for the customers, for both play a wide-open brand of football.

Fairly Evenly Matched

On the basis of this season's performances, Missouri and Georgia Tech will be fairly evenly matched. Tech lost two games while Missouri dropped only one, a 19-0 decision to Ohio State when most of the squad

Game Slated For El Paso New Year's

30 Players, Coaches To Make 2,500-Mile Trip; Cards Get "Good" Guarantee

An invitation to the Sun Bowl, New Year's Day classic in El Paso, Tex., was received and promptly accepted yesterday by Catholic University, it was announced by Coach (Dutch) Bergman.

The opponent, chosen some time ago, will be Arizona State Teachers College, of Tempe, which went through its Border Conference season without a loss to give Coach Dixie Howell, former Alabama triple-threater a title in his second year of coaching. The Teachers' record for the year shows eight victories and two losses, one more than was charged to the Cards. The Bulldogs, in addition, were credited with the high-scoring mark in the Southwest this season.

High glee marked reception of the bid at the local school. Coach Bergman said he was "pleased" with the selection of his Cards for the game, though also somewhat surprised.

"We heard from the Sun Bowl authorities," he said, "after going through our first six games of the season without a defeat. At that time, of course, it was merely a note "sounding us out" and we thought the whole thing hinged on our remaining unbeaten. The disastrous loss to St. Anselm's which followed, our only defeat of the season, we thought finished us. It's pretty evident, then, that we did no angling for our bid."

Thirty men, coaches and managers will be in the entourage which starts on its 2,500-mile trek near the fifteenth of the month. Coach Bergman could not divulge the amount of the guarantee which was to pay for the trip, but again he let one word cover his attitude—"pleased."

"One thing I can tell you," the veteran mentor admitted," is that we're getting a very good guarantee. As a matter of fact, it's much better than what we got out of the Orange Bowl game in 1936."

Barring fatigue on the part of the Cardinals after their long train ride, the game promises to be one of the highest scoring clashes in any of the numerous bowls. Both teams are fairly overgrown with offensive power. Tempe scored 212 points this season, while Catholic University's record of 239 points was topped by only a few schools in the East.

Auto Dealer Is New Lessee Of Golf Course

Edward G. Adams, Silver Spring automobile dealer and a member of the Indian Spring Club, is the new lessee of the National Women's Golf Club, according to J. Barrett Carter, president of the Pocahontas Realty Co., the Maryland firm that owns the 150-acres on Bradley boulevard.

Adams, who will take over on January 1 plans to start immediate construction of nine extra holes, and, although he realizes the fairways and greens would not be in perfect shape, he hopes to open 18 holes as a private club by June of 1940.

Seventy-five of the 150 acres are now in use as the present nine-hole course, and Adams plans to clear the underbrush on the additional acreage for the new nine, borrowing a little of the property to increase the yardage of the nine holes now playable. One of three course architects that have submitted bids will be selected.

The new owner has leased the property for five years, and has an option on a five-year renewal.

Adams plans to tear out the rooms now used as an apartment-hotel for additional locker room space.

With the advent of the golf season in the spring, Adams plans to have the course running as a private nine-hole layout, while he is undecided on the status for the first 60 days or so after he takes over.

Capt. I. Mishtowt who has been running the club since 1935 on a rental basis from the owners, will stay until the last minute, with his last official action a New Year's eve party that will probably last until time for Adams to take over.

The Silver Spring auto dealer expects to start work on the course this month, in clearing what will be the new course.

He has not selected any of the personnel, although he will name a manager soon after taking over, but the professional post will be vacant until spring. He is a good friend of Al Jamison, who is now pro at Indian Spring, a course that is in the act of being reduced to nine holes.—M. P. W.

Here's a large complaint in the making over the ruling on Bo Russell's field goal attempt for the Redskins Sunday against the Giants. These fans turned up in the offices of The Post, demanded pencil and paper, and wrote, "I want to complain about the Redskin-Giant game because it was not played fair. I want that game played over." They identified themselves as John Barouyrian (left), and George Khosrofian, both 11-year-old Thomson School students. Brewers Open Home Cage Season Tonight Against Barons

Two Ex-Heurich Cagers to Appear With Wilkes-Barre Team at Brewery

The revised and greatly strengthened Washington Brewers inaugurate their 1939-40 home American Basketball League season at Heurich Gymnasium tonight when they entertain the Wilkes-Barre, Pa., Barons at 9:15 o'clock.

In a special added attraction, Delaware & Hudson meets the Jewish Community Center in a Heurich Amateur League game at 8 o'clock.

The largest crowd to attend an American Basketball League opening locally since the days of the Palace Laundry professionals is expected to be in attendance for tonight's debut.

Filchock on Hand

Frank Filchock, forwar passing wizard of the Redskins, will toss up the first ball and special features of entertainment include a novelty musical arrangement.

James J. (Jimmy) Lake will man the voice amplifier and Chuck Solodare, long recognized as the most efficient and colorful official in big-time basketball, will referee.

Two former Brewers will head the invasion of the Brewers tonight. Micky Schonfeld, fourth high-ranking scorer of the American League, with Heurich last season, will start at forward, while Dee Martens, who served a brief hitch with the Brewers, will play one of the guards.

New Faces in Line-up

Schonfeld, formerly a player and coach with George Washington University, will be closely watched in his return to Heurich gymnasium, where he always has been an outstanding scorer. Indications are that Posnack, one of the finest defensive men in the American League, will cover Schonfeld in his homecoming appearance.

Coach Posnack will introduce interesting new faces in Mike Bloom, towering 6-foot-6-inch center recently acquired from the Philadelphia Sphas; Dick Lee, rangy forward purchased from Wilkes-Barre, and Eddie Boyle, former Temple University sensation. Carroll Shore, formerly of the National A. A. U. all-star team that completed a successful invasion of South America two years ago, also will represent the Brewers.

Tonight's starting Heurich line-up probably will be comprised of Posnack and Ben Goldfadden, guards; Bloom, center, and Lee and either Whitey Wilson or Boyle, forwards.

Shore, Ralph Bennie and Kit Carson will be held in reserve.

had competed in tournaments. Carruthers declined to comment upon the nature of these reports.

The chairman said, however, that this is the first action of its kind ever taken by the U. S. L. T. A. Never before has the association handed out a temporary suspension. In the case of Bill Tilden and others in the past, permanent suspensions were made by the executive committee. But, under authority granted the rule committee last February, players can be ruled off the courts at any time and kept off until the executive commitee acts on their cases.

Third Ranking Amateur

Mako is the Nation's third ranking amateur player. Sabin, although not among the Nation's first ten, was named to the preliminary Davis Cup squad last year, and then dropped after he had quit a tournament at Southampton because he wasn't permitted to use spikes.

Mako, runner-up to Don Budge in the national singles championship in '38, is a veteran Davis Cup doubles player. Gene wasn't used last Labor Day week-end when the United States lost the cup to Australia because he wasn't in good shape. Joe Hunt and Jack Cramer, handled the doubles assignment and lost.

Gene Nonplussed By U. S. L. T. A. Ruling

Los Angeles, Dec. 6 (AP).—Gene Mako is in the dark over the United States Lawn Tennis Association action ruling him ineligible for fuutre amateur competition.

"I don't know what it is all about," Mako said. "I understand players all over the country have been notified of the same thing

"It might be for violation of the eight-week rule, which says we can't play more than eight weeks of tournament competition a year. I understand I'm about four days over that limit, but I'm not sure."

Missouri's Tigers rolled up 148 points and had 58 scored against them, in turning back Colorado 30-0, Washington U. of St. Louis 14-0, Kansas State 9-7, Iowa State 21-6, Nebraska 27-13, New York University 20-7, Oklahoma 7-6, and Kansas 20-0.

Both of Tech's defeats were close decisions. Tech lost to Notre Dame 17-14 and to Duke 7-6, but came through with victories over Howard 35-0, Vanderbilt 14-6, Auburn 7-6, Kentucky 13-6, Alabama 6-0, Florida 21-7, and Georgia 13-0.

The game is almost certain to be played before a capacity crowd, for most of the 35,000 seats are reported to have been sold already.

Daly, Darmohray, Mellendeck, Meglen Named G.U. Captains

Injured '38 Standout Gets Honorary Berth; Letters Issued to 25 on Undefeated Club

Myron Darmohray, Frank Meglen and Francis (Red) Daly were the active players cited, while Joe Mellendeck, who was inactive due to injury this past season, also was named in a sportmanlike gesture.

Mellendeck, who recently submitted to an operation on the injured knee that kept him inactive on the gridiron this past season, has returned to school and his operation has been pronounced a complete success.

Twenty-five letters were voted Georgetown University players and Manager Frank Galvin by those assembled.

Scoring laurels for the locals in the first half were fairly evenly divided between Giebel, Pajak, Rizzi and Miller. The game wasn't ten seconds old when Rizzi took a pass from Pajak and hung up the first basket with a beautiful one-hand shot from almost behind the goal, and from that point on Georgetown was never headed. Biasi brought the count 2-1 on a foul shot, but the driving locals opened a gradually widening abyss from then on. The score at the half was 32 to 15.

Another Terror Capt. Bob Stropp, attempted to fill the scoring shoes of Biasi during the second period, but his club continued to run second despite four field goals for Stropp. Both benches sent in new teams to "breath" the starters, Georgetown's second line proving almost as effective as its first.

The Hilltopper had even less trouble in the preliminary. Hoya Frosh, working smoothly and efficiently, trounced Western High by a 44-20 margin, Will Bornheimer checking in the best performance with 13 points. Perrell led the losers with 6.

Bethesda Five Schedules Two County Foes

Blair and Rockville On Card; Western Tech Also Booked

Bethesda-Chevy Chase didn't get into the Metropolitan High School basketball tournament last year because, as officials of the annual schoolboy meet put it, it hadn't undergone a "representative schedule." In answer to that, Coach Allan Vogt yesterday released a 1939-40 cage schedule almost identical with that his charges went through during the 1938-39 season.

"If we played a 'representative schedule;" the husky graduate of Ithaca College offered in explanation," we'd have a marvelous record and a slightly less marvelous basketball team. Most of the schools in Montgomery County can't give us a respectable game year in and year out, so what's the use of playing them? Montgomery Blair and Rockville High are our real competitors. If breaking even or holding an edge over them isn't enough, we don't particularly care about a bid to the Metro tourney."

Blair and Rockville, therefore, are down for a pair of games each on the Bethesda-C. C. card, and such schools as Gaithersburg, which accentuate basketball less, are notably missing. The suburbanites, after four weeks of strenuous drills, meet Jefferson High tomorrow to start their season, and before it's over they'll engage Western, Tech, Washington-Lee, Eastern, Roosevelt and most of the city's strongest fives.

With the loss of Hilleary Hayden, Bob Whelan and Russ Mizell, only three lettermen remain for Coach Vogt's first plunge into the cage wars. They're Johnny Shumate, Jim Kinsman and Bill Barnsley. Another youngster with considerable promise, Francis Hughes, will be out for a week or more with a sprained ankle. He earned his letter in 1937 but failed to play last season.

From a banner crop of 75 potential stars, Coach Vogt has his squad cut to a mere 15, and the standouts among the survivors are probably Alton McClure, Bob Keene, Bob Lebling and Duke Hashagon.

Washington's needy children will benefit from tonight's show which pits Joe Cox, Kansas wrestling villain, against Ernie Dusek, Nebraska, in the 90-minute feature.

Cox and Dusek, who claim they have been "hating" each other for some seven years, are both out to win the local "Public Enemy No. 1" title, Turner's agents insist. Cox took steps along this line last week with a victory over Abie Coleman and three irate spectators.

In the one-act presentations leading up to the big show will be Jack Hader versus Ralph Garibaldi, Chief White Feather bringing out the latest thing in growls and grimaces against Abie Coleman, Bob Wagner against Tom Casey and Bibber McCoy against Alan Eustace.

G. U. Grid Schedule For 1940 No Tougher

Hoyas Pick Up 3 New Opponents, Drop 2; Boston College Main Addition to Comparatively Light Program

Picking up three new opponents and dropping two, Georgetown University's 1940 football schedule, released yesterday by Gabriel Murphy, is a great deal like the card just completed in the strength of its opponents. The Hoyas have not been beaten for two years but their schedule has been passed up as too light by the various bowl game heads.

Boston College is the principal addition, as the Eagles, beaten only by Florida in an upset, were one of the outstanding teams in the East this year, numbering Temple, Kansas State, Auburn, Detroit and Holy Cross among their victims. They will be played November 16 at Boston.

3 New Opponents

The Eagles, V. P. I. and Waynesburg are new foes, while West Virginia and Bucknell were dropped. The local rivalries with George Washington and Maryland will be continued, while Temple, Syracuse, N. Y. U. and Roanoke were retained.

The game with Waynesburg is apparently an early season tuneup tilt with the Pennsylvanians. Boston College rates above both Bucknell and West Virginia, while V. P. I. has not yet attained the national notice of the two schools dropped from the schedule, so in the eyes of the hardened grid experts, Georgetown's schedule is just about its present caliber.

Home Games Scarce

Jack Hagerty's club has only three home games on the nine game card, although five of the games will be played in and around the city. The two "breathers," Roanoke and Waynesburg, will be played at Griffith Stadium along with V. P. I., a team that jumped among Virginia's best this season. George Washington is also a Stadium foe, but it will be the Colonials' home game, while Maryland will be played at College Park.

With a crack freshman team coming up and losing only a minimum of strength through graduation, Hagerty's charges will figure to extend their winning streak through Roanoke, Temple, Waynesburg and V. P. I. before the trouble starts with N. Y. U., Syracuse, Maryland, Boston College and G. W. in a row.

September 29, Roanoke.

October 4, at Temple; 12, Waynesboro; 19, Virginia Tech; 26, at New York U.

November 2, at Syracuse; 9, at Maryland; 16, at Boston College; 23, George Washington.

Farkas Sets Scoring Record as 13 Pro Football Marks Fall

D. C. Player Crosses Goal 11 Times

Andy Also Kicks Two Extra Points; O'Brien, Hutson Each Set Three Marks

By the Associated Press

New York, Dec. 6.—Andy Farkas, fleet fullback of the Washington Redskins, set a new pro scoring mark according to final statistics released today. The former Detroit U. star, in his second year of pro ball, crossed the goal line 11 times and booted two extra points for a total of 68. In all, 13 new marks were set.

John Drake was second in scoring with nine touchdowns for 54 points. The former touchdown record was nine, set by Don Hutson in 1936 and equaled last year. Jack Manders, of the Bears, accounted for 50 points with four touchdowns, 17 conversions and three field goals, and he broke the lifetime scoring mark of Ken Strong, New York Giant back, with 345 points for seven seasons. Strong is five points back, in one more season.

Dick Todd, of the Redskins, was eighth in his first year in the league, with six touchdowns and a pair of conversions for 38 points.

With Davey O'Brien and Don Hutson, each with three new marks to his credit, setting the pace, eight players participated in the breaking of the 13 new marks, including seven in forward passing, three in pass receiving, one in ground gaining and two in scoring.

Ward Cuff, of the New York Giants, with seven field goals, was the only player to retain his 1938 championship.

Rookies Parker Hall, of Cleveland, and Bill Osmanski, of the Chicago Bears, won championships in forward passing and ground gaining respectively.

Hall, O'Brien, Frank Filchock, of Washington, and Dwight Sloan, of Detroit, all stamped their names on the record books with brilliant forward passing performances. O'Brien's 1,324 yards on aerials shaded the 1,127 mark of Sammy Baugh in 11 games in 1937, and also the 12-game total of 1,239 yards of Arnie Herber, of Green Bay, in 1936. His 21 completions against the Chicago Bears set a new game record.

Hall completed 106 passes, 25 more than Baugh completed in 1937, and his efficiency average of 50.9 per cent was third best in the league to give him the individual passing title. Filchock and O'Brien were tied for second place. Filchock completed 55 of 89 tosses for an efficiency percentage of .61.7, bettering Ed Danowski's .54.2 mark of last season. Filchock also had the most touchdown passes—11.

By Merrell W. Whittlesey.

A little after midnight every Tuesday Owner Hugh Arbaugh shuts the windows of his Silver Spring Bowling Alleys, draws the blinds in the side facing the apartments and in troops the Moving Picture Machine Operators for a league session that gets them home with the milkman, or later.

After showing the Garbos and Gables to audiences in the 57 theaters in the metropolitan area all day and half the night, the operators and sound engineers bowl while others sleep in order to get in a little recreation. They can't all get together in the day of evenings.

The league started last winter when a dozen or more started bowling in Rossyln, and formed two-man leagues. Others asked for franchises, and the loop grew to a half-dozen five-man teams.

When the 1939 bowling season was under way the team outgrew the limited space at the Rosslyn Alleys, and moved to Brookland Alleys. The first night there an officer of the law walked in around 1:30 a. m. and told them if this went on another week he'd have a patrol wagon backed up to the door and haul 'em away. They didn't investigate the District curfew, it seems.

They're Happy Now

So after conferring with Arbaugh and Maryland police they moved to Silver Spring, where they can bowl to their hearts' delight. The neighbors haven't come through with a single complaint and everybody's happy.

While the 12 teams of men bowl upstairs, the wives and sweethearts are busy with their four-team league downstairs that helps keep peace in the family and saves those embarrassing questions of "And where were you until this hour?" and "Out bowling" wouldn't be very good answer.

Bill Anderson, sporting a 11[illegible] average, tops the bowlers, whil[e] the ladies have their own leader i[n] Evelyn Stuart, who posted a 14[0] game last week and currently ha[s] high average, high strikes, high spares and on down the line. Anderson is president of the league.

Ralph Grimes, one of the operators, is a prominent public links golfer and gave Andy Oliveri quite a battle in the city muny championship. Tommy Reed, president of the union, is an ardent supporter of the loop, while DeWitt Bittenbender, the incoming president in January, and his wife are active. The Exhibitor Magazine gave a trophy for the winning team.

When the league action is over around 3:30 or 4 a. m., there's only one thing the boys regret. They hate to ask Manager Earle Sticking and the pin boys to stick around for a few pot games.

Hugh Arbaugh Breaks a Record For a Soft Drink

How would you like to bowl five games including one of the highest three-game sets of the season, a national record for four games and a five-game total only 28 pins back of the all-time mark, and only win a soft drink?

That was the experience of Hugh Arbaugh, owner of the Silver Spring Bowling Alleys, who was bowling a friendly set with Ray Roberts.

He started with a 148, followed with 162 and then a 138 for a three-game total of 448 and a score or more onlookers gathered around. His next effort was 163 that topped the four-game mark of 600 by 11 pins, and he finished with 130 for a 741 five-game count. The marks were unofficial as he was not in competition.

Orioles Defeat Rovers, 8 to 4

Baltimore, Dec. 6 (AP).—The Baltimore Orioles zipped to their third victory over the New York Rovers in four starts with an easily earned 8-4 tally tonight in an Eastern Amateur hockey game.

The victory placed the Birds within one point of the league leading Rovers.

The local boys took the edge at the start, scoring three times in the first period while the New Yorkers tallied once. The performance was repeated in the second period.

season and stole their practice uniforms. So, for the remainder of the season they worked out in their street clothes. They have no stadium or playing field, and couldn't have a "home" schedule. They worked out on the Brooklyn parade grounds in Prospect Park, and their means of going to and from their games was the subway.

Team Will Go South by Boat

Yet if they owned all the princely trappings of a Notre Dame, including casks of specially distilled water, they couldn't have been prouder of their football club this season. It is the first championship team they've ever had.

If present plans go through, the team will go South by boat, along with as many hundred supporters as the ship will hold, and work out aboard ship en route. Under this plan the boat would be their hotel during their stay in Miami. The two teams that will buddy around together before and after the game and be the guests of the Orange Bowl officials at the New Year's Day classic. There will be educational tours to the Everglades and other points of interests. One of the principal fans at the game will be the "Boiler Kid," Fred Snite. Bing Crosby will kick off, under the planned arrangement, and there is a chance that the President may address the two teams, by raido, during the half.

The dime, which a kid with infantile paralysis will toss up to decide which team kicks and which receives at the start of the game, will start the annual "march of dimes" program and be sent to the White House. If possible, Lou Gehrig, whose wonderful character in the face of adversity stands as a symbol for the game, will make the presentation.

W. G. A. Meeting Slated Today

The annual business meeting and election of the District Women's Golf Association is set for Columbia Country Club today, with the luncheon preceding the business session at 12:30 p. m.

Mrs. Robert A. Lacey, of the host club, will take over the president's office for a second term while Mrs. Gale E. Pugh and Mrs. Oscar Coolican will fill the first and second vice president's posts, respectively; Mrs. R. L. Hutchison, secretary, and Mrs. P. J. Winkler, treasurer.

Reports for the year, suggestions for the 1940 schedule, and other business will be transacted. More than 150 members of the association are expected.

Auburn Hopes To Wreck Vols' Rose Bowl Bid

Meagher's Team Primed for Game With Tennessee

By the Associated Press

Knoxville, Tenn., Dec. 6.—With Tennessee's passport to the Rose Bowl in their hands, Audurn's Tigers are all steamed up about Saturday's game against the unbeaten, untied Volunteers.

Elmer Salter, the Tigers' publicity purveyor, didn't mince words today in reporting that Coach Jack Meagher's crew is set to go all the way against the Volunteers, who haven't even been scored on in nine games this season.

"Our scouts say it is suicide to make one mistake against Tennessee," Salter said, "but our boys are ready to shoot the works.

"Coach Meagher expects to have them in perhaps the best physical condition since early in the season. Malvern Morgan, center, and George Kenmore, left halfback, both withheld from the Florida game due to injuries, are back in the fold again."

Salter might have recalled that Auburn has given Tennessee its toughest competition in the past two years. In 1937, the Tigers dumped the Vols, 20 to 7, handing Maj. Bob Neylano his worst licking in 13 years as Tennessee's skipper. Last year the Vols squeezed through, 7 to 0, scoring in the fourth quarter after recovering a fumble on the Tigers' 24.

"We got off to a slow start this year," Salter remarked, "but the boys seem to have found themselves and looked like a real football team in beating Villanova, Louisiana State and Georgia in a row before battling Florida to a 7-7 tie."

Ice Palace Pinmen Break Season Mark

Lucille Young's High Game of 153 Leads Against Red Circles

The Ice Palace quintet, winner of seven of its last ten games in the Ladies District League, snapped the season's record set mark by 37 pins in blanking Red Circle last night at Lucky Strike. The winners had a 1,732 count for the three games, featured by a final game of 610, while the Red Circle, led by Mamie Payne's 328, could only count 1,510.

Mrs. Lucille Young, captain of the team and bowling instructress at the Ice Palace, was high with a 153 game and 381 set, while Jessie Sacrey had 148 and 364. Other scores that figured in the set included "Stimmie" Hart, 345; Margie Bark, 335, and Marie Spates, 317.

LUCKY STRIKE

Irene Gochenour was high with game of 128 and set of 136 in the Eastern Star League at Lucky Strike, while the leading Washington Centennials posted game and set totals of 527 and 1,504 in blanking Lebanons.

Anne Smith had one good game to take honors in the Lucky Strike Ladies League but she fell down in the other two and June Fisher captured set honors with 321. The latter's team, FAA No. 1, had a 524 game and 1,441 set in taking second place with an odd game victory over Social Security.

TEMPLE

Eastern Pharmacy rolled one of the highest sets of the year in the Temple Minor League at Northeast Temple a 1,725, that included high game for the night of 589 and was good for three games over Eastern Pharmacy.

ARCADIA

George Beyer's 136 game for Analysts led to high team set of 1,632 in the Dynamite League at Arcadia. Judy Simpson had high set of 363 for Sleuths, while top team game went to Dubs, with 571.

ICE PALACE

Ed Donaldson and Al Bean divided game and set honors in the C and P League at Ice Palace, the former with a 135 game and Bean with a 385 set. Georgia went into undisputed possession of first place.

Royal Business, With Obert Up, Wins Charles Town Feature

By Walter Haight
A Staff Correspondent.

Charles Town, W. Va., Dec. 6.—The combination of Royal Business, the queen of the half-milers and Willie Obert, America's oldest active jockey, made good for the favorite players in the Alan Clarke Handicap, named for the Maryland breeder and former major league pitcher. Installed the favorite in a field of ten, Royal Business crossed the finish line a half-length in front of a photo finish for place money, in which Pike & Gilpin's Royal Teddy was judged second, with Mrs. E. A. Christmas' Gay Amazon shunted into third position

Those in the crowd of 6,000 who played Royal Business as if the race were already won, collected at the rate of $4.20 for the usual deuce. The daughter of Sun Meadow and Pretty Business, claimed by O. S. Jennings in Maryland, ran the 7 furlongs in 1:26 2-5, over a good track.

The ancient Obert, who has ridden few horses this year, seems to have taken a new lease on life. He has had four mounts here, has won with three of them and was beaten a head on the other. With Royal Business carrying top weight of 118 pounds, Obert kept the filly going and the victory was a well deserved one.

Gay Amazon took command as the field left the starting gate, and was followed by Chance Queen and Caidon. Royal Business was within striking distance, as was Royal Teddy. Leaving the back stretch, Royal Business moved up to press the pace of Gay Amazon and they both swung wide entering the stretch. Jockey Leland, on Royal Teddy, saw this move and swung to the inside. It was a mad scramble then for the finish line, with Obert and the filly holding sway to the end.

The day brought a $36 payoff in the daily double when a pair of well played horses finished in the proper brackets. G. T. Strother's Evergrand won the second race from Bell Thorn and Kenner to pay an individual mutuel of $8.60. Jockey C. Kirk, who rode Bell Thorn, made a futile claim of foul against the winner.

VANELDER, close up from start and kept on inside, moved up gamely to engage WESTING and wore down latter in stretch run. WESTING raced CALLAO into defeat to open good lead, but could not resist winner. ESPINO GOLD went evenly, but could not threaten seriously. CALLAO was listlessly handled. NETTA WOOD closed ground.

EVER GRAND, off in first flight and sent up on outside, rode BELLTHORN close while taking command and was tiring at end. BELLTHORN raced KENNER into defeat, was slightly bothered and came willingly at close under punishment. KENNER had keen early speed to set pace, but tired in closing test. COLLEEN DONN was off poorly and gained gradually. JACAM could not keep up.

LITTLE HARPIST moved up boldly along backstretch to get to CIRCUS LIGHTS, took command and then swerved in front of latter. CIRCUS LIGHTS assumed command going to first turn and came again when straightened in stretch, but Mora could not do mount justice when LITTLE HARPIST bore in. BUDDY AL moved up menacingly approaching stretch and tired. FRED'S WARNING was taken up sharply when in close quarters going to first turn. MORNING FLIGHT was in trouble along backstretch. WALLI had early speed and stopped. LILTEEN appeared sore going to post and was through early.

DUNLAD, within striking distance from start, worked way to serious contention approaching stretch and closed with good courage, but was no match for the winner. CURVES was keen forward factor from start and weakened in final test. DARBY DU was rushed to front and stopped. GROUCHER'S BOY was well placed early.

FIFTH RACE—About 7 furlongs. Purse, $800; handicap. For 3-year-olds and upward. Start good from stalls. Won driving; place same. Went to post 3:40. Off 3:45. Winner, O. S. Jennings' b. f. ROYAL BUSINESS, within striking distance from start, came with good energy when placed to drive, ran out slightly entering stretch and lasted under hand riding. ROYAL TEDDY raced on outside and forwardly to stretch turn, was sent to inside when leaders went out and closed fastest of all. GAY AMAZON set a good pace, but ran out at stretch turn. PALKIN unseated rider and ran off before start and showed good effort. CHARMING HEROD lacked early speed and closed a gap. CAIDON was close up in early running and faltered. CHANCE QUEEN had early speed. HIGH HEDGE was off last and failed to show speed.

WOODBRIDGE forged to the front early, set good pace while shaking off PACK SADDLE and withstood repeated challenges of MON DOIT to hold sway to end. MON DOIT, within striking distance from start, came to outside for racing room, but was held safe by winner. SLIEVEREIGH could not keep up in early stages, dropped back and came again while saving ground to close full of run. PACK SADDLE was closest to pace to stretch turn, was taken up when caught between leaders and failed to rally thereafter. ELAMP moved up menacingly and tired. FRAZEE had speed for 5 furlongs.

SYLACAUGA, going along in the thick of contention from the start, went to the front after 7 furlongs, withstood a hard drive willingly in the last five-sixteenths and outstayed HUSTLE HOME. The latter, reserved off the pace for 6 furlongs, worked her way forward steadily, reached the winner and fought it out determinedly in the closing drive. NEVER IDOL, lacking early speed and a trailer for 7 furlongs, swung to the outside when gaining full stride and finished stoutly. BOSOPI was rated in front until challenged, then failed to rally. COUNTER PASS raced strongly, but could not get to leaders. LAST SCAMP was used up forcing early pace. LUCKY TURN was held safe. CANIMAR was unable to menace.

Dear Al:

Well, Dunlad did some running yesterday to be second to War Rumor. I said he was trying and he really was doing that. Before the race, Kenneth Gilpin, the steward, said he had a 4-year-old maiden that he would like to race against Dunlad with the loser taking both horses. After Dunlad finished second, he said he would still race but not on the same basis. Well, he's still a maiden, but I have some hopes for him. Sammy Palumbo was up to renew press box acquaintances and reported that he could not get down to weight. He weighs around 122 pounds. Says that his wife and family are getting along O. K. No better evidence as to the interest in the present meeting of the Charles Town Jockey Club can be furnished than the 1,007 entries filed for the first three days' sport. Horsemen filed 352 entries for the December 4 opening. Tuesday's card attracted 356 entries, while 319 entries were taken by Race Secretary Fred Burton. Assistant Greg Johnson, Clerk of Scales A. R. Griff Offers Travis for McQuinn

Wasdell Involved In Deal for Browns' Star First Baseman

Yankees have been making for several years. Last season, the Yankees acquired Oral Hildebrand from the Browns and the pitcher's presence made the Yankees even more formidable.

York Deal Still in Fire

If Griffith can rush his rule to adoption then the Yankees would be removed as a competitive bidder for McQuinn. That is, unless a deal between the two clubs is made suddenly. The Nats owner declares that he is virtually assured of the majority vote needed, with the St. Louis, Philadelphia and Cleveland clubs aligned with Washington on the plan, and the Chicago team inclined to regard it favorably.

The Nats have not relaxed their efforts to acquire Rudy York, of the Tigers. Negotiations have been delayed, however, by the absence of Owner Walter O. Briggs of the Detroit club, who is scheduled to arrive here late tonight.

The negotiations for York, launched by the Nats and Tigers last summer, also involve Travis. With the Tigers possessing two first basemen in York and Greenberg, and handicapped by the lack of a shortstop, Griffith is hopeful they will listen to an offer of Travis and other talent. The Nats discount the reported willingness of the Tigers to make a trade for Greenberg, but they would be highly interested in him.

It was learned also that Griffith and Harris would attempt to use Outfielder Taft Wright as a medium of clinching any trade that appeared near completion.

New York Giants sent Third Baseman Tom Hafey to Atlanta, of Southern Association, to complete payment on Infielder John Rucker.

New York Giants sold Outfielder Morris Jones, who was optioned to Jersey City, of International League, to Rochester, of the same league.

Chicago White Sox sold First Baseman Mervyn J. Connors, who had been playing with Shreveport, of Texas League under option, to Syracuse, of International League.

New York Giants bought Outfielder Allen (Dusty) Cooke from Jersey City conditional on his recovery from an arm operation.

Montreal, of the International League, released Manager Burleigh Grimes and will name no successor at this meeting. Grimes gets his $10,000 salary for 1940, unless he makes another connection, in which case Montreal will make up the difference.

Jackets and Tigers To Play in Lynchburg

Lynchburg, Dec. 6 (AP).—The chamber of commerce's sports committee voted today to accept an offer from Hampden-Sydney and Randolph-Macon colleges to play their annual football game in Lynchburg for the next three years.

R. D. Ramsey, business manager of the chamber, said contracts will be drawn and signed as soon as details can be worked out. The game will be played next year in City Stadium November 23.

Umpire of Giants-'Skins Game Issues Denial He Disagreed With Referee

in a direct line extended. I had an unobstructed view and I observed very carefully.

In my judgment, the kick was good.

I was seated with a group who were almost exclusively Giant rooters—men who attend all of the Giant games. Without exception, they agreed that the kick was good.

Before I left New York I talked with many Giant supporters and I found no one who saw the play who was satisfied that the kick was wide of the posts. Generally the better the view, the more certain the opinion that the field goal was scored.

For the good of professional football, I believe that that game should be replayed.

If this is not done, at the very least, some positive method of determining the success or failure should be used in future games. It is unnecessary and often unfair to allow the vision, good or bad, of any one official to be the absolute and final authority. An electric eye or an extension of the goal posts with a net between the posts might be considered.

At any event, we who pay the bills should be assured that the team which wins gets the credit.

'Good,' Says Cop

Sports Editor:

You ask us to write about "Bo" Russell's kick last Sunday, so here goes . . . I ended up in a box seat behind the goal posts, and if that kick wasn't good, then I hope I never put a leg over another Harley-Davidson to catch a guy who thinks the speed limit on Bladensburg road northeast is 55 miles per hour. "Bo's" kick was good a-plenty.

Sports Editor:

I attended the game last Sunday in New York and agree with the opinion of the majority that the ball was good . . . however, I do not criticize Referee Halloran, and I do not think that one man should have to shoulder the responsibility of scoring points. Why can't there be photo finish pictures taken for final decisions.

H. A. TERNEAK.

Now Come Scallions

Sports Editor:

Scallions to you and the rest of the sports writers in this city, who, like the fans, have been trying to think up a hundred and one excuses for the loss suffered by the Redskins to the New York Giants . . .

Why don't the fans in Washington get wise to themselves. They are the poorest sports and sorest losers I have ever seen or heard of. When all is said and done the best team won, and that team was the Giants. So here's hoping they beat Green Bay, because I want to hear the excuses the fans will have for the Giants beating the team that beat the Redskins.

The Irish Speak Up

Sports Editor:

I am glad I saw the field goal kicked by Bo Russell last Sunday which actually, if not technically, won the Eastern championship for Washington. I was seated in the upper tier at the 45-yard line, but could not see whether the ball went between the uprights any better than the referee apparently could.

When the referee failed to indicate his decision as the ball cleared the crossbar, I naturally followed the flight of the ball myself to see where it landed. Unless I was in a coma at the time . . . the ball landed in the centerfield stands at a point just below and to the right of the time-of-day clock . . . which splits the goal posts as well as the gridiron.

This was proof enough for me that the ball was well within the imaginary confines of the extended uprights, because the Einstein theory doesn't apply to footballs even though Mr. Halloran may think that it does.

MORRIS A. BEALE,
Athletic Officer, D. C. Post, No. 17, Irish War Veterans.

All Right on Radio

Sports Editor:

I can unhesitatingly say that in my opinion the kick was good, as I was seated right squarely in front of my radio that I was in position to give an unbiased verdict . . .

What I would like to know is whether there are any valid arguments against the use of a lightweight net, which would fill up all the space between the uprights and from the crossbar to the top of the uprights. This might necessitate the uprights being made of steel as they would no doubt have to be about twice as high as the present wooden poles, but the additional cost of these steel poles, or masts, would be trifling if it would do away with such an occurrence as happened last Sunday. The rules could be changed so that if the ball struck the upright and was deflected into the net the kick would be good, or if it was deflected outside the poles it would not be good, and, of course, if the ball went directly into the net it would be good. Maybe there are some valid reasons why this idea is not practical, and if there are, let us have them.

This idea is not original with me, and I believe it was first suggested by someone over the radio.

Cotton Subsidy Reduction Hits Futures Prices

New York, Dec. 6 (AP).—The cotton futures market appeared confused today by Tuesday's late announcement of a cut in the export subsidy rate after uncertain fluctuations, the list closed 1 point higher to 4 lower.

Prices were hammered down 1 to 9 points at the outset although Liverpool jumped sharply. Brokers termed the movements here and abroad adjustments of price differences due to the smaller subsidy. When this early pressure subsided, fairly good demand got under way and the list rose briskly. In late trade, hedge selling and liquidation by a leading spot interest forced the market down again.

2nd National To Retire Pfd., Add Capital

Directors Vote $1.50 Per Share on Common Stock, Payable Jan. 2

Plans for the complete retirement of of the outstanding preferred stock of the Second National Bank were made yesterday by the directors, according to an announcement by John A. Reilly, president.

The original issue of preferred stock amounted to $150,000. Since 1937 the bank has purchased for retirement, from its own resources, preferred stock having a par value of $100,000. During the same period the institution increased its surplus account from $200,000 to $350,000.

At the forthcoming annual meeting of the bank on January 9, a resolution will be presented to the shareholders authorizing an amendment to the articles of association, enabling the bank to increase its common capital stock from $450,000 to $500,000. The stock has a par value of $60 per share. The present stockholders will have the privilege of subscribing, at par, for one share of the new stock for every nine shares owned by them.

The proceeds from the sale of the new shares will be used to retire the remaining preferred stock amounting to $50,000. The sale of the new shares has been fully underwritten by the directors thus assuring a completion of the new financing early in 1940, Mr. Reilly said.

The decision of the directors to recommend to the shareholders an increase in the common capital structure, he said, is in line with the policy of the bank to keep a proper ratio of capital funds to deposits.

Since the authorization of the issuance of preferred stock in 1934, the deposits of the bank have steadily increased. During the five-year period an increase of over 52 per cent has been noted.

At the meeting the directors also voted a common stock dividend of $1.50 per share payable January, 2, 1940, to shareholders of record December 20. The bank increased its annual dividend rate to 5 per cent last June.

Former Partner In Paine, Webber Gets Year in Jail

The Department of Justice and the Securities and Exchange Commission reported yesterday that Judge John C. Knox, in the United States District Court for the Southern District of New York, had imposed a sentence of one year and a day imprisonment upon Stephen Paine, former partner of Paine, Webber and Co., who was convicted last week of fraud in connection with the manipulation and diversion of securities held in the portfolios of several investment trusts. Others convicted were Thomas W. Morris, S. Leo Solomont and Howard F. Hansell, jr. Ralph H. Robb had pleaded guilty.

Morris, Solomont and Hansell were each sentenced to two years imprisonment. Sentence upon Robb was deferred by the court.

The 18-count indictment upon which the defendants were convicted charged that beginning about November 1, 1937, the defendants devised a scheme to defraud a number of investment trusts and their stockholders, including Insuranshares Corporation of Delaware, Bond and Share Trading Corporation and Burco, Inc., of large sums of money.

The scheme, according to the indictment, consisted in Paine's arranging for loans or advances of approximately $600,000 to the other four individual defendants upon their promise to deliver as collateral for such loans certain marketable securities of the investment trusts having a market value substantially in excess of such loans, which securities would be abstracted from the portfolios of the investment trusts.

Stocks Make Small but Definite Gain Absence of Foreign Selling a Factor Domestic Bonds in Good Demand

New York, Dec. 6.—A gain of approximately three-quarters point on the average today was the best the stock market has been able to turn in since October 17. The actual figure was 0.71 point and it meant advances in individual features of 1 to 3 points, which is something the market has not been treated to for many a day. Actually the list has been displaying some firmness throughout the first few days of this month, having declined on only one of the five trading days. Advances have been small, and they may represent no more than a moderate amount of short covering. Contributing to the firmness has been an absence of foreign selling. This was an important factor in the irregular decline of November, but apparently foreign countries are not pressing the securities of their investors on this market in its present weakened condition. There has been no foreign buying.

Pleasing to the bullish forces today was an increase in the activity of the market. The volume amounted to 990,620 shares, the largest for the big board since November 10.

Of greater significance than the firmness of the stock market has been the more impressive advance in prices of leading commodities. On the outbreak of the war there was a sharp advance in virtually all commodity prices as consumers rushed to build up their inventories, whether these inventories took the form of carloads of raw materials in a warehouse or extra bags of sugar in the kitchen cabinet. As is customary, the rush exceeded all reasonable proportions, as consumers added to their own fears.

Commodity Advance

This was immediately reflected in a sharp rise in commodity prices, from which there was an inevitable reaction. Now the advance appears to have got under way again, but this time it is moving in a more orderly manner and is based on a demand which is not fostered by fear of an inability to get supplies.

The rush on the outbreak of the war carried the Moody commodity index to a figure of 172.8 on September 22. On November 27, it was at 159.9, but in the last week there has been a steady forward movement. The following table shows the prices of numerous major commodities a little more than a week ago and their prices today. Each has joined in the current recovery.

	Nov. 27.	Dec. 6.
Wheat (No. 2 hard, cif, N. Y.), bu.	$1.11⅛	$1.20⅛
Corn (No. 2 yellow, N. Y.), bu.	.65¾	.70⅜
Oats (No. 2 white), bu.	.51¾	.53⅛
Rye (No. 2 Western, cif, N. Y.), bu.	.70¾	.79⅛
Cotton (middling upland), lb.	.0989	.1029
Silk (grand white, 13-15) lb.	3.38	3.63
Quicksilver (per flask, 76 lbs).	135.00	142.00
Moody's commodity index	159.9	162.0

Business News Good

Business news generally was favorable. Power output missed a new record by a narrow margin, due to the observance in New England of the Thanksgiving Day holiday on November 30. Only 3,000 kilowatts separated the week's figure from the record high. Most chain store systems reported gains for November. In the steel industry, the Iron Age reported new orders diminishing, but the backlog of orders not materially reduced. Engineering News-Record reported major engineering construction awards for the five weeks of November as averaging more than $60,000,000 a week, or 11 per cent above the weekly average a year ago. It was however, 1 per cent below the October average.

Trading in listed bonds reflected strength today in the great bulk of domestic issues, whether of the investment or speculative type. Foreign dollar securities remained irregular, however, with Scandinavians under pressure. Only a little business was done in the strictly investment category, as most institutional buyers preferred to await the offerings of the Public Service Co. of Indiana and the Consumers Power Co. Turnover in listed issues amounted to $8,200,000.

Norway Bonds Lower

Norwegian bonds showed losses to 5 points in a market made nervous by the Russian aggression and rumors that the Stalinists expect to expand in all directions. Danish bonds were off more modestly. Finland 6s rallied 6 points on the plucky fight against Russia and the proposal that the coming inter-governmental debt payment to the United States be returned to the small country. French bombs fell sharply, and there was no demand for other belligerent bonds. Colombians were firm in the Latin-American default division.

Speculative railroad bonds were in good demand in the corporate section. Gains were mostly fractional, but quite a few advances of 1 to 2 points also appeared. Local traction securities reflected renewed interest, on predictions that unification details will be worked out before long. Holding company and sharesprivilege bonds developed strength, owing to gains in the equities.

United States Treasury issues remained quiet and almost unchanged. Long term obligations were in fair demand, but short dated issues drifted lower. The market now expects early announcement of the $1,378,000,000 note refunding operation. Best grade utility, railroad and industrial bonds were steady to firm.

SEC Threatens To Bar Mo. Pac. From Trading

Commission Gives Railroad 30 Days To Amend Statement

By the Associated Press

The Securities Commission announced yesterday that it would order withdrawal of the common and preferred stock of Missouri Pacific Railroad Co. from registration on the New York Stock Exchange unless the company amends within 30 days its registration statement to show contingent libability.

The original registration statement was filed in 1934 for 5 per cent cumulative convertible preferred stock of $100 par value and common stock of $100. The SEC said that in registering its stock Missouri Pacific had failed to disclose all details of a clause in 1931 contracts for purchase from terminal shares of certain securities for a consideration of $15,965,201 plus interest and an additional $4,369,062 to be derived from the income and liquidation of certain of the securities.

The commission said that each of the contracts showed that "the buyer agrees to buy St. Joseph stock when, as and if it shall be authorized by the Interstate Commerce Commission to acquire control of said St. Joseph Belt Railway Co."

But, the SEC added, the statement did not show another clause which provided that "in case the buyer shall not for any reason complete the purchase," terminal shares could sell the stock at private or public sale and the buyer (Missouri Pacific) would be liable for the difference between the proceeds and the original purchase price in the contract with terminal shares.

The SEC said this amounted to a contingent liability for the full amount, because the undisclosed clause nullified the provision for ICC approval. The SEC said that Missouri Pacific had "clearly failed to disclose the contingent liability in the manner prescribed" by the ICC.

Contract Bridge

By Florence Osborn.

When a man is playing against his mother-in-law he is certainly deserving of sympathy; but when his wife is his mother-in-law's partner, and his only ally against this formidable feminine foe is his father-in-law, he needs all the help the cards and the niggardly gods of luck can give him.

In the case of E. L. M. the memory of the mechanics of the trump coup, plus artful application, saved his five-club contract and the masculine sense of superiority.

Here is what he says:

"I sat South and was playing with my father-in-law against my mother-in-law (West) and my wife (East).

"Perhaps three no trump would have been a better contract, but we reached five clubs with these cards:

	Father-in-law ♠ J 9 2 ♡ K Q 8 7 3 ◇ A K 3 ♣ 6 4
Mother-in-law ♠ 7 6 4 3 ♡ 10 9 6 5 ◇ 10 8 5 2 ♣ A	NORTH WEST EAST SOUTH	Wife ♠ K 10 5 ♡ A 4 2 ◇ Q 7 6 ♣ J 10 8 7 5
	Husband ♠ A Q 8 ♡ J ◇ J 9 4 ♣ K Q J 9 3 2

"A small spade was opened, the jack forced the king, and I won with my ace. The king of clubs was won by West's ace and another spade was returned, on which dummy played small, East the ten and I the queen. The queen of clubs lead revealed the bad news. But then I thought, 'Why can't I make one of those coups I've read so much about?' So I did, as follows:

"I led the heart jack, which was won by East's ace. I trumped the heart return, went over to dummy's ace of diamonds, trumped another heart and went back to the king of diamonds. Then I led the heart king. My wife, struggling valiantly, discarded a spade and so did I. When the heart queen was led she discarded her diamond queen, but I, too, threw my last diamond and I was in! East had to ruff the spade nine with either the eight or ten of clubs, and my nine and jack won on the last two tricks."

Parks Johnson and Wally Butterworth, a pair of amiable gentlemen who are making a pretty fair living because they learned that John Q. Citizen and Mrs. Citizen like to talk, are in town to put on one of their "Vox Pop" programs this evening at Union Station.

"Vox Pop" is a glorified "man-in-the-street" or radio-inquiring reporter. Johnson and Butterworth set up equipment in any spot they choose and in about five minutes they are completely surrounded by curious passersby. They then grasp a microphone firmly and start asking the watchers questions, thereby turning the populace into a very excellent radio show. So good, in fact, that Wally and Parks are perpetually slaving away for one sponsor or another.

They started back in 1932 in Houston, Tex. They soon had a regional network, and in 1935 went on the N. B. C. chain. Last October they moved over to C. B. S.

Johnson retains most of that Texas drawl which makes such a pleasant impression on Yankee ears. Yesterday he went to some lengths to point out that "Vox Pop" was not a quiz show in the strict sense of that term.

"Quiz shows," according to Johnson, "are shows consisting of questions asked and answered. Questions of fact. Well we ask 'em anything. Some of the answers are factual but most of them are opinion.

"Another thing about question shows in their preparation. Anybody conducting a show of that type has a long list of questions and answers in his possession. We start off with a few but once we get under way we toss away the script and let the mass interview take its natural course."

A New York radio columnist penned the best description of "Vox Pop" when he said it consisted of a series of sensationally unimportant queries.

Johnson and Butterworth will originate one of their programs from the observation car of a crack Florida streamliner. It will be the first "Vox Pop" to be broadcast outside of New York in four years. They spent most of the summer at the World's Fair where they astounded officious policemen by insisting that the crowds be permitted to come as close to the mikes as they wanted.

"The DOCTOR" by MARY ROBERTS RINEHART

Synopsis

It was two weeks since Dr. Chris Arden completed his internship and started a practice of his own. His first mistake was to rent an office and room from the shiftless Walters family, but he had felt sorry for mild, inefficient Henry Walters and his drab, listless wife, Lily. They obviously needed the money. His sympathy did not lessen when he thought of their lazy daughter, Katie, and ne'er-do-well son, Dick. It is Sunday morning, and Chris descends the stairs to his office with a jaunty step. No one looking at him could know that here was a new doctor ready to serve a city which was seemingly unaware of his existence. But Chris does have one patient that morning. Beverly Lewis, from the mansion on the hill, brings her terrier and apologetically asks him to remove a bone from the dog's throat. She leaves in a huff when Chris refuses to accept a fee. Chris visits the hospital where he had trained. Its main support is Beverly's father, Staunton Lewis, local magnate and political power . . . Many changes had taken place since Nettie Simpson became head of the nurses' training school years before and it was hard for the old nurse to get used to new methods. Occasionally, they spoke of replacing her, but the hospital temporized. Her assistant was brisk and modern. They let it go at that.

Well, Chris, how goes it?"

It was the first time she had called him by his first name, and he felt suddenly less alone.

"Fine! I had a patient this morning."

"Already?"

"Very interesting case," he said soberly. 'A bone in the throat. Patient in bad condition. But my skillful manipulation——"

"What are you talking about?"

"It was a dog," he told her, grinning. "Quite a good dog, I imagine, belonging to a young lady whose name, I gathered, is Beverly Lewis, and who went out in a state of fury because I wouldn't let her pay me."

"Dear me, Beverly! It doesn't sound like her, somehow. What did you do, Chris?"

"I don't know. Probably I haven't the proper bedside manner. What about her, anyhow?" His manner was casual. "I know she can laugh and cry and get in a temper, but that's about all."

"That's about all you need to know about any young woman," she said dryly. "Well, she's Staunton Lewis' daughter, with all that that means. She's got her mother's eyes and her father's chin, and I gather she's a very popular girl in society, whatever that may be."

"Cuts me out, whatever it means! I wouldn't dare to lift my eyes to such a star. In fact, I don't look much above the curbstone these days."

He was still smiling, but now she looked at him closely. For all his bantering he looked tired, she thought, and his cheerfulness was obviously forced.

"It takes patience, Chris," she said.

"I have plenty of that. It's about all I have got."

"And are you comfortably settled?"

"I'm settled. That is, I have offices and a place to live. I suppose I'm comfortable enough. I haven't thought much about it."

"No," she said thoughtfully. "You wouldn't. Will you take the word of an old woman that it won't last? Like this, I mean. You all go through it, Chris. And if you ever find that you need a little money until things are better——"

He got up and, going around the desk, put a hand on her shoulder. "You're the salt of the earth, Miss Nettie," he said gravely. "But I'm all right so far. If the time comes——"

"You'll come to me?"

"I'll promise to think about it," he said, and, stooping down suddenly, he kissed her cool old cheek. "And that," he said gaily, "is the first time I've kissed a nurse in your hospital! What do you propose to do about it?"

He felt cheerful again when he had left her. At the office he learned that a railroad case had come in and that Bergman was operating, and he decided to go up and look on. Bergman was pleasant, if detached.

"Interesting case here, Doctor," he said. "Glad you came in."

Bergman was working with his customary deftness, thes small vein on his forehead standing out as it always did when he operated. Chris had a feeling of having come home again, accentuated to an almost lyric happiness when later on Bergman, having asked the time, suggested that he finish for him.

But when the work was done he found himself wandering through the hospital aimless and homeless. He did not belong there. It might be years before he did. Even the nurses smiled at him with detachment.

"Good morning, Doctor. Paying us a little visit?"

"Just looking in to see how you're managing without me. Hear it's not so good!"

"Well, we certainly miss you."

And then that was all. Swinging along the hallways, head thrust forward after his old fashion, but not belonging, not needed. Meeting one of the interns, to be greeted warmly.

"Hello, old man. How's the practice?"

"I don't know. I haven't tried any yet."

Then he wandered into the newly installed X-ray room with its black walls, and listened to the strange vernacular of Scott, now in charge.

"Good God! A man certainly has to move to keep up these days! Here I am, just out of school, and I don't even talk your language."

"I wouldn't worry about that, Chris. This is highly specialized stuff. Send your people here, and we'll tell you what's wrong with them."

"I'd rather hoped to find out for myself."

"Go to it. Pretty soon you'll find that you need us a lot more than we need you, my lad."

Scott, if arrogant, was vaguely uneasy. He had a dry spot on one of his fingers, and he led Chris into the daylight to look at it.

"Fellows abroad have been having a lot of trouble," he said. "I don't suppose it means anything, but it heals and then dries and cracks again. And I've got a family. Trouble is, we don't know anything yet about the rays."

He talked on nervously, and Chris gathered that virility itself might be involved as the result of unguarded X-ray work.

"I've got a family," Scott repeated. "I suppose I could lose a finger, but —my wife wants another baby. We lost one last year. I'm—by God, sometimes I'm frightened."

"But why stick, Scott? If you've got a burn already—"

"Oh, I'll stick. It's my job, and I know it. Besides, I need the money, and the hospital needs the work. Come in here. I want to show you some plates."

He was the enthusiast again, wrapped up in his specialty. He held the bad finger stiff as he handled his plates, but his face glowed; and Chris, standing big and vigorous beside him, thought of the woman who had lost a baby and now wanted another one.

"Oh, forget that. I'm all right."

Chris could not forget it, however, as he started for home again that morning. Where did a man owe his duty? To his family when he had one, or to a profession eternally demanding and eternally ungrateful? Chris did not realize it on that bright day of May, 1910, with the lilacs blooming in the park, fresh in spite of the city soot, and the benches peopled with young lovers; but years later he was to be asking himself the same question, and to be as far as ever from the answer.

Chapter V

Now Nettie hardly knew the place, with men like ghosts walking, coated, capped, masked and gloved. Even the old bustle and hurry were gone: an operation was now a silent thing. It had lost drama. The tables were wheeled into a silence and later on returned from it. For good or bad the thing was done; like a business, she thought. Like taking in a watch to be mended.

Yet she knew them all, these hospital doctors—knew the fine ones and the mean ones, the generous and the nickel-chasers; knew, too, their tempers, their ambitions, even their jealousies. For medicine was a jealous profession.

She had, like a few, cared for only a handful, and come near to loving as a son only one, and that one was Chris Arden. His going had been a blow to her, although she had never acknowledged it even to herself. And on Sunday mornings ever since, she had waited for him, clad in her best silk dress and austerely watching the door.

"Is her majesty receiving?" he inquired.

"She is always in to you. Come in and sit down. Only don't smoke," she warned him, "or the hospital will say I've taken to vice in my old age.

Beaver Refuses To Work for U. S.

Strasburg, Va., Dec. 6 (AP). — A beaver named Billy doesn't give a conservation dam in the Shenandoah National Park much of his time.

Billy and his mate are the only survivors left of four such animals placed in the park as a natural conservation measure. The park rangers had high hopes for Billy, but the furry little dam-builder showed none of that old park service spirit.

Instead, he ran away from his wife and started a private dam project.

Migratory Labor Problem Studied In Old Dominion

Richmond, Va., Dec. 6 (AP).—The problem of migratory labor came up for discussion today at a conference between W. C. Holley, of the division of farm population and rural welfare of the Department of Agriculture, and Thomas B. Morton, Commissioner of Labor.

Morton said he would call in the near future for a Statewide conference of representatives of the Health Department, the Department of Public Welfare and the employment division of the Unemployment Compensation Commission to study the problem which he said, "is a big one that will require much work."
